SUMMARY.

Mr. Lloyd George is making good progress in his task of forming a new Administration.

An understanding has been reached with the Labour party, which has decided to take part in the new Government.

Mr. Lloyd George's policy practically amounts to State control of all industries and means of transport.

Details of the fall of Bucharest show that General von Mackensen sent a letter to the commander demanding surrender.

The Roumanian general refused to accept von Mackensen's terms, as Bucharest was an open town.

The resistance of the Roumanian infantry was soon overcome. The enemy penetrated the line of forts, and entered the town.

The abandonment of Bucharest was delayed as long as possible to save the artillery and supplies of provisions and munitions.

The Roumanian army is considered intact, and is retiring to pre-arranged positions, where the Russians are concentrating.

A Berlin official message claims the capture of 9200 more prisoners in Roumania.

There is great jubilation throughout Austria and Germany over the fall of Bucharest.

The German Emperor has telegraphed his congratulations to General von Mackensen.

Athens was decorated with flags in honour of the capture of Bucharest.

The Allied Governments have decided to blockade Greece until they are given reparation for the outrages in Athens.

All French and English residents have quitted the city, and are going aboard vessels at the Piraeus.

There have been many dastardly outrages on Venizelists, including a brutal attack on the aged Mayor of Athens.

The mob fired off fusillades recklessly in the streets to prove that the Allied detachments were overpowered.

Some of the Venizelists opened fire on reservists who were besieging and wrecking houses.

The German Press pretends that the relations between Greece and the Allies have improved.

As a matter of fact, diplomatic relations have been suspended.

A "New York Herald" despatch from Athens states that the Royalists have made Athens a slaughter-house.

The homes of Venizelists have been looted. Women suffered the grossest indignities.

The enemy is bombarding the Allies' positions around Monastir.

A portion of the height at Sokol recently captured by the Servians was carried by the enemy.

South of Seres the British cleared up a Turkish trench and brought back prisoners.

Sir Douglas Haig reports considerable reciprocal shelling in the vicinity of Thiepval ridge.

There has been a lively artillery struggle in the region of Hill 304, in the Verdun sector.

A German official message claims the capture of the summit of Hill 304.

The "New York Times" says Washington officials anticipate important changes in the French commands.

These are said to be the result of the secret sessions of the Chamber of Deputies.

There is a likelihood, it is said, that General Joffre will retire.

In that event, he will probably be succeeded by General Nivelle, now commandant at Verdun.

The Italian Chamber of Deputies has accepted the Premier's motion to shelve for six months the Socialist pacificist resolution.

The Italians have repulsed two successive attacks by the enemy on the Carso plateau.

The Premier has cabled on behalf of the State Government wishing Mr. Lloyd George success in his task.

"We are confident," he said, "your wisdom and energy will extricate our cause from the difficulties that beset us."

Mr. Holman says the State Government has not been invited to participate in the Federal recruiting campaign.

The special board began yesterday the work of settling the outstanding matters between the miners and the coal owners.

Mr. Justice Edmunds said the public would probably have to pay a higher price for coal as the result of the concessions.

He urged that any agreement come to should be permanent, so as to ensure an uninterrupted supply of coal.

The industries at Lithgow are gradually getting back to normal conditions. The ironworks have been re-started.

The collieries are in full operation, and coal is being despatched for the Victorian railway contract.

The Minister for Labour has arranged a conference between the parties concerned in the moulders' strike.

A fire broke out yesterday morning in business premises off Abercrombie-street. The damage is estimated at £2000.

In referring to the long sitting of the Assembly Mr. Holman yesterday alluded to the solidarity of the National Party.

"I have every confidence," he said, "in the party successfully weathering any further storms that may lie before it."

The hearing of the claims made by the Musician's Union for higher wages and improved conditions was resumed yesterday.

After hearing evidence and argument the parties agreed to confer, and the Court adjourned until 2 p.m. on Monday.

A deputation to Mr. James, from the Diocesan Synod and the Civic and Morals Association, protested against the Totalisator Bill.

The Minister's reply was not encouraging, but on matters in which the bill might be improved, he would consult the Cabinet.

At the Diocesan Synod strong opposition was taken to a motion which aimed at varying the Moorebank Estate Trust.

Speaking at the Scots College, Professor Macintyre, said the nation was now in the darkest hour of a desperate struggle.

Only with faith in God and the courage of endurance, he remarked, could we hope to be victorious.

At a meeting at the Town Hall a Women's National party was formed, with the title of the Federation of Australian Women.

In the House of Representatives the debate was resumed in committee on the Government's financial policy.

The Supply Bill was passed through all its stages after an amendment to reduce the amount had been negatived.

It was announced that the Income Tax and Assessment Tax Bills would be introduced next week.

The Interstate Labour Conference concluded its sitting yesterday. The subjects discussed dealt chiefly with military questions.

There was a fair amount of business transacted in the Real Estate market this week. The indoor sales were well attended.

The markets closed yesterday in a little healthier condition than they opened on Monday. There was a better country demand.

All oils were very firm. Holders advanced the price of linseed first brands to [illegible].

The tea auction brought out good competition. The market was strong, prices realising up to 12½d.

A fair amount of business was effected in investment scrip in the Stock Exchange yesterday. The market continued to weaken.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in mining stocks. Edna May Deeps weakened.

The Bradford tops market, it is cabled, is disorganised, and nothing is doing. Quotations are impossible.

Forecast.—Warm to hot and sultry throughout; another general rainstorm and thunder approaching; a cool, southerly change by Sunday.

FOR THE HOLIDAY TOUR—AND AFTER.

PALMER CORD TYRES.
PALMER CORD TYRES.

Motoring at Christmas may take you into some rough country. That means severe strain on the tyres.

Of all Tyres Palmer Cords (the BRITISH tyres), are best-equipped to resist strain, because they alone have no canvas. Instead of canvas they have a foundation of rubber-impregnated cords. These entirely eliminate internal friction.

List on request.

THE GRANT SIX

THE CAR OF THE HOUR.

We have much pleasure in drawing attention to the ADMIRABLE QUALITIES of this six-cylinder Touring Car, as demonstrated by the fact that it has just completed a trip to Melbourne and back with the engines

RUNNING CONTINUOUSLY FOR 9¼ DAYS!

The bonnet was sealed at the Police Traffic Office on Nov. 27, prior to the start, and the seal was inspected and certified to be intact when examined by the Traffic Superintendent on Dec. 7, after a STUPENDOUSLY SEVERE TEST, owing to ABNORMALLY BAD WEATHER ENCOUNTERED. In one place horses had to be requisitioned to PULL THE CAR OUT OF A BOG; during another stretch the BONNET WAS COMPLETELY UNDER WATER. Yet the Engine throbbed merrily throughout, never ceasing until the journey was completed.

The Car which put up the above record performance is on view at our garage, 162 Castlereagh-street. It is just as it returned—covered in mud and glory. You will find the sight worth a visit.

Outstanding features of the Grant "Six" are:—EXTRAORDINARY POWER, REMARKABLE ECONOMY, EXCEPTIONAL COMFORT.

If you want a SMART, STYLISH, QUIET, FLEXIBLE CAR for city driving, buy a Grant Six.

If you want a TOUGH, STRONG, RUGGEDLY-BUILT Car, with EXCESS POWER, and PERFECT SPRINGS SUSPENSION for country road work, buy a Grant Six.

The upkeep is amazingly light—whether you view the matter from the standpoint of repair bills or from the standpoint of fuel, oil, and tyres.

You will like this big Grant Six five-passenger touring car. It has the SIZE, the DIGNITY, the COMFORT, the ROOMINESS the BEAUTY of LINE and FINISH that command RESPECT and SATISFACTION.

"You cannot cast the shadow unless you have the substance," and Grant Six looks and acts like a fine car BECAUSE IT IS A FINE CAR.

Judge it from the standpoint of intrinsic value—and compare it with other cars considerably in excess of its price. You will then buy the Grant Six.

REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

Mr. Austin, of Mudgee, has used his Buick Six for a distance approaching 30,000 miles.
Mr. Doughty, of Wagga, in ten months has travelled 20,000 miles.
Messrs. Dew and Tyne, Kempsey-Comara Mail Contractors, write:—"Our Buick has now travelled 30,000 always loaded with mails and passengers. We are always up to time with our mails."
(Messrs. Dew and Tyne have bought a second Buick this week.)

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

Each of the above cars is less than a year old. The work is so constant that the engines are never cold—taking six days a week as working days, the daily average is 120 miles.

Each of the above Cars in a year makes trips equal to:—
EIGHT TIMES TO PERTH AND BACK; OR FIFTEEN TIMES TO ADELAIDE AND BACK; OR THIRTY TIMES TO MELBOURNE AND BACK; OR six years of the average motorist's use without the constant expense of renewals.

We are told the average distance per year a locomotive travels is 15,000 miles, and yet these Buick cars go double, and are still running as well as ever.

DELIVERIES.

Sales of Buicks are enormous—just as we expected. 48 during November—30 during December so far, consequently we have no dead stock, but we can supply a limited number of "Fours" and "Sixes" from stock, and we urgently recommend those intending to buy for coming holidays to place their orders immediately, and be certain of delivery. We are not making this suggestion with a view of getting orders, but to avoid disappointment on your part. BOOK WITH YOUR LOCAL AGENT.

PRICE:—THE "FOUR." ROADSTER, £335. TOURING, £350.

THE "SIX." ROADSTER, £410. TOURING, £425.

Buicks are made in no factory than that of the Buick Motor Car Co., Flint, Mich., who make no cars other than Buicks in Fours and Sixes.

THE HUPMOBILE CAR.

There isn't anything you can ask in a Car that some maker won't claim to have; nothing you can demand that some one won't promise.

But with men of experience promises won't pass for performance. Before you'll buy a Car you want to sample it for yourself.

You know what things you want a Car to do with ease and comfort. See if the HUPMOBILE will do them. Put her through her paces, and see if she measures up to your standards.

Petrol costs less than advertising space. So we'll gladly furnish the petrol and the Car if you'll ride in it; drive it—if you will—over any road you may select, up any hills you may choose.

It's a waste of time to tell you how smoothly the HUPMOBILE takes a hill on top gear, if instead we can put you in the Car and let you float up the hill yourself. Why talk about its swift acceleration and its obedient power if we can put your foot on the accelerator and let you find it out for yourself?

You can know nothing of the pride of owning this beautiful Car through reading about it. You can have no conception of its roomy, comfortable seats until you sit in them.

You are a good judge of Motor Cars, and though you may not be ready to-day for a new Car you will be before long. So we invite you to ride in the HUPMOBILE. It will impose no obligation. We simply want to present facts about our Car in such a way that no one can question them; facts no motorist can afford to ignore.

WHAT MOTORISTS ARE ASKED TO PAY FOR MOTOR TUBES—AND WHAT THEY GET

Every Motorist knows that one of the essentials to satisfactory tyre service is the use of full weight, air-retaining Tubes, free from porosity, leaking joints and valves. The main factor is the quality and thickness of rubber in tube, in conjunction with first-class manufacturing methods. AS TO QUALITY, "DUNLOPS" COMPARE FAVOURABLY WITH ANY TUBE MADE. As to construction—the best method is the laminated principle, AND EVERY DUNLOP MOTOR TUBE WE HAVE MADE FOR THE LAST 10 YEARS has been built up of numerous layers of thin high-grade rubber.

IN THESE RESPECTS "DUNLOPS" HAVE NO EQUAL

HAVE YOU EVER WEIGHED A SET OF DUNLOP AND IMPORTED TUBES OF SIMILAR SIZE AND THEN COMPARED THE WEIGHTS AND PRICES?

THERE'S A SURPRISE COMING WHEN YOU DO!

You will find that the Dunlops are lbs. heavier and thicker—YET they cost considerably less to buy. The following prices are interesting, and should decide every Motorist in favour of these Australian-made Tubes:—

| Size | DUNLOP | IMPORTED (3 Makes) | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Millimetres. | Each. | "A" | "B" | "C" |
| 760 x 90 | 20/- | 29/- | 28/- | 29/6 |
| 810 x 90 | 23/- | 33/- | 31/- | 31/- |
| 815 x 105 | 34/- | *46/- | *30/- | 41/6 |
| 880 x 120 | 37/- | 52/- | 42/- | 47/- |
| 880 x 120 | 40/- | 54/- | 44/- | 49/6 |
| 895 x 135 | 45/- | 65/- | 51/- | 66/- |
| American Size. | | | | |
| 30 x 3½ inches | 23/- | 31/- | 28/- | 29/6 |
| 32 x 3½ inches | 26/- | 36/- | 31/- | 33/- |
| 34 x 4 inches | 32/- | 48/- | 41/- | 48/- |
| 35 x 4½ inches | 40/- | 56/- | 45/- | 55/- |

* Here are instances of the difference in weights:—Dunlop 815 x 105 tube weighs 4lbs. One imported tube, same size, weighs 2¼lbs.; another 2¾lbs. Note the prices.

IT'S THE SAME WITH DUNLOP COVERS. We give more high-grade materials and more miles for less money. In face of these facts—why purchase imported tyres? Fit "Dunlops"—it pays!

JAPANESE AFFAIRS.

(BY DR. J. INGRAM BRYAN.)

OVERPLUS OF SPECIE.

TOKYO, Nov. 6.

Japan's accumulation of specie continues at a remarkable rate, the total now aggregating over £63,000,000, which is fast approaching the £70,000,000 mark predicted by the nation's financiers some six months ago. Naturally, the Japanese money market is redundant, and banks are still at a loss how to dispose of surplus capital. There is a growing disposition to seek investments abroad, and the larger banking institutions are already taking steps towards that end.

Financiers range themselves in two groups; those advising investment in Europe and America, and those preferring to take advantage of the scarcity of capital in China. The latter are regarded at home as displaying the more patriotic spirit, as every increase of Japanese investments in China is supposed to enhance Japan's interests in that country. But the opening of a branch of the great Mitsu Bashi banking house in London some time ago indicates the views of the greater financial corporations; while other important banks are despatching agents abroad to open connections in Europe and America with a view to investments. The Mitsui and the Sumitomo firms are, however, looking more in the direction of China for the present.

This being the first time in her history that Japan has had more money than she knows what to do with, the situation is uniquely embarrassing, and the Government is keeping a sharp lookout on the situation in the financial world. Some of the fund under control of the Government has been utilised recently in redemption of the first and second issues of 4½ per cents. floated in Britain, which brought the national foreign debt from £140,115,233 down to £139,627,083 at the end of last October, the net decrease being £488,150. At the same time domestic loans increased from £107,739,580 to £107,744,420, an addition of £4840. Further domestic indebtedness was incurred during the last three days of October, when the Government floated a £2,000,000 5 per cent. loan at 96, to run 18 years. The issue was oversubscribed only to the extent of £800,000, some £2,400,000 of the total being taken at a small premium, the largest of which was not more than 40 sen per 100 per subscription. The greater portion of the subscription represented Tokyo, which took over £1,800,000 of the total. The result is regarded as less favourable than that obtained from the £7,000,000 Russian loan floated in Japan some time ago, due probably to increasing interest in the more profitable share market at home, which for some time now has been showing remarkable activity. Indeed, shares on the Japanese market have been advancing ever since the beginning of the war in Europe, and a gambling spirit is obviously dominant owing to a plethora of easy money. Japanese speculators opine that times will continue good while the war lasts.

TRADE IN CHINA.

As to Japanese commerce, all interest at present centres in trade with China and India, but especially the former, concerning which plans are being laid to meet the British and American competition that is expected as inevitable after the war. As Japanese trade is encouraged and assisted in numerous ways by the Imperial Government, it is expected to enjoy unusual advantages in the race for Chinese markets, and Japanese merchants are already announcing that British and American competitors will find it rather difficult to face the situation. There appears to be a growing jealousy in Japanese commercial circles with regard to the prominence of British trade in China, though it is insisted in the vernacular press that the jealousy is on the side of foreigners. Japanese manufacturers appear to be anticipating industrial discontent in Europe after the war, when wages return to normal conditions, which they suppose will afford them considerable advantage in the struggle for markets in China. Japan is more especially trying to hold her own in China against the cheaper grades of British and American cotton manufactures, though the higher price of raw cotton will no doubt work equally against the manufacturers of all nations. How to win the Indian and Australian market for cheap cottons is another question engaging the attention of Japanese industry.

BUSINESS EXPANDING.

According to official reports, Japanese commerce continues to expand, recently creating a record in the favourable balance of trade as a result of extraordinary extension in some lines, though notable declines were registered in others. Among the more prominent items on the export list at present are tea, coal, waste silk, camphor, fish oil, raw silk, cotton yarns, copper, braids, habutai, while those showing a decrease are cotton tissues, cotton underwear, and matches, chiefly owing to advances in the American cotton market and the ban on imports in Britain. Among imports the more important fluctuations are marked in raw materials and machinery. Imports of raw cotton naturally increase as the season for cotton shipments sets in, and the decline in imports of machinery is due largely to difficulties connected with the war in Europe. The most prominent imports continue to be raw cotton, wool, oil cake, and iron rods, bars, and plates. The ban on imports issued by the Russian Government is not expected very seriously to affect Japan's trade with that country, as most of the exports at present are war supplies.

AUSTRALIAN METALS.

Recent difficulties experienced by Japanese dealers in obtaining zinc and lead ores from Australia are now being overcome, and contracts have been placed for shipments of 90,000 tons of zinc ore during the next twelve months, which will yield between 30 and 40 thousand tons of refined metal, sufficient for the year's requirements. There has been a remarkable development in the manufacture of chlorate of potash during the past year, and now as much as 238 tons are exported in two months, which is more than a whole year's output before the war. The price of coal has recently advanced greatly, due to the industrial activity created by the war and high freight on coal exports. A Tokio firm has just accepted a contract to supply 500,000 fuses with guncotton for Russia; but war orders from that country have much slackened of late, to the great disappointment of those who expected the £70,000,000 loan recently floated by Russia in Japan to be wholly expended on munitions and supplies in this country. During the six months from January to September.

ENEMY TRADE.

German trade with Japan amounted in value to £3,588,000, which is £151,500 less than last year. The items were mostly aniline dyes, pulp, iron, and machinery, imported chiefly through Denmark, Switzerland, and the United States. There has been considerable agitation in Japan against the continuance of enemy trade, and now the Imperial Government is taking steps to fall into line with the other Allies in the prohibition of trade with the enemy. An Imperial order is in preparation for early issue forbidding trade with the Central Powers, and providing severe penalties for its violation. The Germans Asiatic Bank in Yokohama, which had been promoting not only enemy trade, but enemy propaganda, has been closed by the Japanese authorities.

JAPAN YEAR BOOK.

We have received a copy of the Japan Year Book for 1916. This mine of general information and statistics on Japan and Japanese territories has now reached its eleventh annual publication. The volume, in addition to information on Japanese history, politics, education, and kindred matters, contains an exceedingly useful "Who's Who?" in which are found brief biographies of leading Japanese. Commerce and industry occupies a large section, and among the appendices is a useful business directory. There is a good general map of Japan, Korea, and Manchuria, and there is also included an official statement regarding the European war. The Australian agents are Messrs. George Robertson and Co. Our copy is from Messrs. A. G. Baxter and Chatfield.

THE MINERS' FEDERATION.

WHAT IT STANDS FOR.

(BY OBSERVER.)

The recent coal strike has provided one of the few instances (during recent years, at any rate) where the strike weapon has been successful in obtaining for the miners something they were unable to secure by more peaceful methods. The fact that public sympathy was to a large extent with the men must be held responsible. For, after all, it is the community that pronounces on the merits of a dispute, particularly when the cessation of work means a stoppage of the supply of so essential a commodity as coal. The idea of boys of tender years having to work in the bowels of the earth for nine hours each day undoubtedly appealed to the people generally, and made them more tolerant than would have been the case had the strike occurred over a matter of wages. Nevertheless, it has to be recognised that the unions implicated, as well as those who merely "awaited developments," will look on the victory achieved as a great triumph for combination. The case was well put by a prominent miner in the course of a chat with the writer. "It wasn't the Judge who gave us the eight hours," he said; "and it wasn't Billy Hughes. It was our organisation." And he spoke emphatically, as one convinced that he was right. If this view is general among unionists—and there is reason to believe that it is—then it would certainly appear that the prospects of securing industrial peace in the future are not by any means bright. For, once let the great body of unionists become seized with the belief that by linking up their forces and presenting an uncompromising front to the employing classes they can compel their demands, however drastic, and we may say farewell to conciliation and arbitration.

The idea of a federation that was to embrace the whole of the miners throughout the Commonwealth was for years a cherished dream, and it is difficult to say with whom the idea of this one big union originated. But because there was a disinclination on the part of many men in the various districts to being "swallowed," the scheme for a long time hung fire. Strikes occurred every now and then over trifling matters, easily capable of adjustment, and as they usually ended by the men being compelled to resume work, the need for a central organisation, always urged by the leaders, gradually impressed itself on the minds of the unionists. Its aims were lofty; the main object (according to statements made from time to time by those working for its establishment) being to prevent strikes. Particularly were sectional stoppages condemned, and it was said that with the advent of the federation no lodge—indeed, no single district—would be allowed to cease work without first submitting a full statement of its grievances to the central council, and receiving official sanction for such action. It was hoped that where districts were unable to affect settlements the federation might be more successful. Thus we were to see ushered in a period of peacefulness, with every miner a contented worker, secure from victimisation, because of the strength of his organisation, but never taking advantage of that strength for purposes other than defensive.

Unhappily, this desirable state has not been reached. Sectional strikes still occur with annoying frequency, despite the often quite honest endeavours of the central officials to prevent them. And the combined strike, predicted by those who opposed the formation of the federation, has come and gone, leaving in its wake much loss, not only to the community, but also to the parties themselves.

The Australasian Coal and Shale Employees' Federation was formally launched in June, 1915, at a meeting of delegates from all over Australia. It embraced the whole of the coal miners of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Tasmania, the membership totalling something like 20,000. From its origin, the new organisation had plenty of scope for its labours. The question of eight hours bank to bank, which had been a burning one for several years, was more prominently than ever before the miners. This was particularly the case on the South Coast, where the men, by an overwhelming majority, decided to fix a date beyond which they would not continue to work more than eight hours a day. Yielding to pressure from the central council, which pointed out that precipitate action might prejudice the western district men's claims then before the Court, and also defeat the northern men in their effort to have the afternoon shift abolished, the southern miners held their hands, and it was not until October of this year that the strike weapon was resorted to in an endeavour to bring about the desired alteration, with the result already known.

Mr. A. C. Willis, who had previously been connected with the Illawarra Colliery Employees' Association, first as president and then as general secretary, put in a great deal of time and labour in bringing about the amalgamation of the unions, and he was appointed first secretary of the federation. A forcible speaker and a capable organiser, with many years' experience in England as a miners' official, he was not long in coming to the fore on arriving in this country. He was employed at Balmain colliery as a working miner for some time, and soon afterwards was elected president of that lodge. A speech delivered at Bellambi (on the South Coast) in connection with the Russell case so pleased the miners that they elected him to the presidency of the district association, and later he opposed Mr. Peter Bowling for the secretaryship, and was returned by a large majority. At the last State elections he was only just beaten for the selection for Wollongong by the sitting member, Mr. J. B. Nicholson. Although a militant unionist, Mr. Willis claims to be on the side of arbitration. But the difficulty experienced in getting claims before the Court is, he says, responsible for most of the industrial troubles that occur, and the unionists can scarcely be blamed for relying on their own resources for a settlement of grievances after other means have been tried and failed. He is certainly a doughty fighter, and has handled the affairs of the federation with marked ability.

Mr. J. M. Baddeley, the president of the federation, is a different type altogether. Quiet and self-restrained, he is nevertheless a man of great determination, and a physiognomist would say that he would be extremely hard to move when once convinced he was on the right track. He is not over-fond of talking, but speaks very forcibly when the occasion arises, and usually has a good grip of his subject. Although born in England, Mr. Baddeley arrived in this country at a very early age, and may well be classed as an Australian. He is a man who, as leader of a powerful organisation, must be reckoned with as a force for good or for ill. One prefers to believe that he is sincere in his desire to see industrial harmony prevailing; for if this man is not honest, then his face belies him.

The other members of the council of the federation are, for the most part, men of very considerable ability. They have been chosen to represent the various districts because of their executive ability, and have all worked at the face, acquiring there a knowledge of coal-mining conditions at first-hand. Perhaps in no other calling has the worker so excellent an opportunity of developing any ability he may possess. The miner usually works alone, or with one mate, and there in the bowels of the earth, undisturbed by outside influences of any kind, he has plenty of time and opportunity to "think things out" for himself. That he sometimes arrives at a wrong conclusion is inevitable, but nevertheless the average miner is admittedly a fairly sane person. The ranks of the Legislatures contain many men who started out in life as pit boys, and two of them at least—Mr. Andrew Fisher and Mr. Joseph Cook—have risen to the highest position the Commonwealth has to offer. It is unfortunate that in the mass the miners are often swayed by passion and prejudice, but no one would deny that in the past they have had much to put up with, and one can only hope that with the spread of education they may come to realise a little better their responsibilities to the community.

SOCIAL.

All contributions and accounts of weddings or other social entertainments intended for the "Social" Column in Saturday's issue should reach this office not later than Friday morning, and be fully endorsed.

Mrs. H. B. Barff, president, and committee of the 13th and 45th Battalions, Bull's-chambers, Moore-street, have issued invitations for a gift afternoon to be held at Sargent's, 290 George-street, on Friday, 15th inst, from 2.30 p.m. to 5.30 p.m. Gifts of socks, pipes, tobacco and cigarettes, tinned foods and fruits, etc., are earnestly asked for; also gifts of money in envelopes. The secretary also wishes it known that the sock competition, in which Mrs. Sargent and Mrs. Keith Jopp are donating prizes of £1/1/ and 10/, will close on Wednesday, 13th inst. The prize socks will be on view at Sargent's on Friday, 15th inst.

At the monthly meeting of the Army Service Corps Comforts Depot, 18 Barrack-street, presided over by Mrs. H. Y. Braddon, it was decided to hold the usual monthly meetings on the first Tuesday of every month. The depot will from December 22 to January 16 be closed. An urgent appeal is made for workers, as all winter garments must be away before closing. The depot has taken over the providing of comforts for the men of the No. 2 Auxiliary Motor Transport, and all interested are invited to attend. A sale of Christmas gifts will be held at the depot on December 20.

At the Garden Theatre, Bayswater-road, next Saturday, a fete and variety entertainment will be held in aid of the 12th Light Horse Comforts Fund. The fete will be opened at 2 p.m., and the ladies taking part include Mrs. Herbert Allen, Mrs. G. E. Fairfax, Mrs. Noyes, Mrs. Lang Campbell, Mrs. Murray Campbell, Miss Dangar, Miss Marcia Lamb, Miss Linton, and Miss Gladys Salway. Mrs. Herbert Allen is president, Mr. Leonard Stephen hon. treasurer, and Miss Clibborn hon. secretary.

In aid of the 7th and 14th Field Company Engineers' Comfort Fund, a social evening will be held in the Paddington Town Hall on Monday at 8 p.m. The Engineers' Band will play both inside and outside the hall.

Lieutenant J. Doyle, of the 18th Battalion, who went through the Gallipoli campaign, and fought afterwards in France, where he was severely wounded during the month of August, returned to Australia last Sunday on furlough. He visited the Comforts Fund Depot on Wednesday, bringing a personal message from the commanding officer (Lieutenant-Colonel Wisdom), to thank all the helpers for their good work, and continued interest and efforts on behalf of the men of the 18th Battalion.

The concert which was to have been held in the Town Hall to-night in aid of the 1st Australian Divisional Ammunition Sub-Park Comforts Fund has been postponed till Saturday, April 7, 1917. The flowers and sweets will be sold this morning at the entrance to the Equitable Building, 350 George-street, Sydney.

The Town Hall Red Cross Sewing Guild was closed on Wednesday until the first Monday in February, 1917.

The annual meeting of the French-Australian League of Help was held yesterday afternoon at the depot, Macdonell House; Mrs. J. Playoust was in the chair. Miss Gurney read the treasurer's report, showing the fund to stand now at £10,000 credit. The loss on the goods that were lost in the Arabia was partly covered by insurance, but regrets were expressed that the gifts did not reach their destination, as some of them were for the "Fusiliers Bretons," the regiment that made themselves famous at Dixmude. Mdlle. Soubeiran read letters from friends in Paris, telling of the appreciation all the goods sent by the league met with among the refugees. One correspondent said that to him were allotted no less than 15 families from the invaded districts. Some of these refugees have lost all. The writers said that strong leather boots were the most acceptable gifts. Mdlle. Soubeiran told of the kindness and interest with which certain local bootmakers had met her demands for shoes, putting in the best leather and workmanship at a low price. On behalf of Miss Cora Carey and herself as superintendent of the rooms, Miss Gurney thanked members of the league for their continued devotion to the work, which after nearly two years, shows no signs whatever of slackening.

A wedding was solemnised on November 11 by the Rev. A. Colvin at St. John's Church, Campsie, when Violette Florence May Dewar, only daughter of Mr. James K. Dewar, of Kaap Huis, Campsie, was married to William Major Colley, only son of Mr. Richard T. Colley, of Penistone, Dulwich Hill. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of crepe de Chine, with large ninon fichu collars. Her tulle veil was simply arranged cap fashion under a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an early Victorian posy of white roses and carnations, with a gold bangle, the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaid was Miss Elsie Colley (sister of the bridegroom). She wore a dress of white voile, trimmed with Valenciennes insertion, with a pink hat and a pink bouquet of roses and carnations, which, with a gold bangle, was the bridegroom's gift. Mr. Fred. C. Skinner acted as best man. The wedding march was played by Mrs. A. Colvin. After the reception, which was held at St. John's Hall, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Colley left by the express for Brisbane, the bride travelling in a navy tailored costume, surmounted by a black Tagal hat.

St. Patrick's Church, Grosvenor-street, was the scene of a wedding on November 25, when the Rev. Father Laurent S.M., officiated at the marriage of Annie, eldest daughter of Mr. William Rath, of Forbes, to Gunner Percy M'Namara, 1st A.F.A., only son of the late Mr. Michael M'Namara, of Newtown, and Mrs. K. Rich, of Redfern. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in pink crepe de Chine, bordered with ninon and taffeta, with a hat of pink tulle, and carried a bouquet of St. Joseph lilies, with streamers of red and blue, the bridegroom's regimental colours. Misses Ada Rath and May Rich were bridesmaids, and wore frocks of organdie muslin, with hats of pink tulle, and carried bouquets of red carnations and blue sweet peas. Corporal Percy Cooper acted as best man, and Sergeant Thomas Dorahy was groomsman. The breakfast was afterwards held at St. Patrick's Hall, Harrington-street, where the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. George Rich, received the guests. Later Mr. and Mrs. M'Namara left for their home at Maroubra Bay. The honeymoon was spent at Forbes.

A military wedding was celebrated on November 15 by Rev. Canon Bellingham at St. Philip's Church, when Laurel Freda, eldest daughter of the late E. Ainsworth Gaden, of Dulacca Station, Queensland, and Mrs. Gaden, Rosemath, Bondi, was married to Sergeant-major Colin Turner Mills, late of Commercial Bank, Elizabeth-street, Sydney, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mills, of Forbes. The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. Willoughby Marsh, and was attended by her sister Enid as bridesmaid. Sergeant-major Alex. Parkes acted as best man. The bridegroom's gifts to bride and maid were handsome wristlet watches. A reception was held at Petty's Hotel. Sergeant-major Mills was presented with a wristlet watch by the staff of the bank.

On December 2, at Fullerton Memorial Church, Crown-street, Sydney, Lieut. H. S. Hatton, attached to 5th Military District (W.A.), only son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hatton, of Roslyn, Marrickville, and Jessie May, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Mackey, of Laurelbank, Marrickville, were married by the Rev. Dr. Burgess. Captain W. J. Bradley was best man. The honeymoon is being spent in Melbourne and Western Australia.

At All Saints' Church, Petersham, on October 25, a wedding was celebrated by the Rev. W. A. Fletcher, when Mabel, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Viney, of Petersham, was married to Ernest, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Pengilley, of Borambil, Quirindi. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory white silk, trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion. The train was veiled in Limerick lace, with sprays of orange-blossom. Her coronet of orange blossom was worn with an embroidered tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white watsonia and rose buds. The bridesmaid, Miss Dora Viney, sister of the bride, was dressed in a gown of white silk, trimmed with Malines lace and insertion, with a pale pink silk ninon picture hat trimmed with pink silk poppies and ribbon. Her bouquets of pink sweet peas and carnations and her gold brooch, set with aquamarine and pearls, were the gifts of the bridegroom. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's parents' home at Albany-road, Petersham. Mr. J. Dawson was best man. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Pengilley left for Katoomba, where they spent their honeymoon. The bride travelled in an Assam silk costume, trimmed with pale pink silk, and a black silk picture hat adorned with large pink silk roses.

At the Congregational Church, Willoughby, the wedding of William H. Faint, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Faint, of Botany, and Edith, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Lester, of Willoughby, took place on October 28. The Rev. W. A. March, of Naremburn, officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory crepe de Chine, the train lined with shell pink. Her bouquet of white roses and watsonias and a diamond ring were the gifts of the bridegroom. Miss Lottie Fevyer, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, wearing a white silk frock. Little Freda Hughes acted as train-bearer. The bridegroom's gifts were bouquets of pale pink roses and sweetpeas and gold bangles. Mr. T. Eames acted as best man. A reception was held at Chatswood Town Hall.

THE CHURCHES.

UNIQUE PRESBYTERIAN EVENT.

The Presbyterian General Assembly of New Zealand has unanimously appointed Mr. J. G. W. Aitken, M.L.C., as Moderator-designate for next year's assembly. Probably no lay elder has been Moderator of a Presbyterian Assembly for 350 years. Such at least is the judgment of Presbyterian historical experts in their "Report on the Eldership to the Pan-Presbyterian Council in Belfast in 1884": "Since the days of George Buchanan it is not known to this committee that a layman has acted as Moderator of a General Assembly." The election of Dr. Bruce as Moderator in England in 1881 was not an exception, for Dr. Bruce, though not ordained, was a licentiate of the Church. Some 350 years ago the first Moderator of the Scottish General Assembly in Edinburgh was George Buchanan, humanist, historian, and so-called layman. John Knox approved of the election in Assembly in 1567. The assembly had conducted its business without a Moderator up to that year. A Presbyterian Assembly to-day, in raising an elder to the Moderator's chair, is simply following in the steps of John Knox.

NATIONAL PRAYER.

"I propose to devote the first Sunday in the New Year to national prayer," writes Archbishop Wright, in the current issue of the "Sydney Diocesan Magazine." "The call of God, who yet delays victory, is insistent to place ourselves as a people more completely at His disposal. Losses felt and losses feared darken our horizon still, yet God has given us many tokens for hopefulness, if only we come nearer Him. For numbers also the responsibility of following up the work begun in the missions is, or ought to be, an additional incentive to prayer. I propose trying to authorise the use of that same inspiring Litany that we found so helpful a year ago. But I especially urge careful preparation during the season of Advent."

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE CROWD.

It is a commonplace to say that any collection of men is essentially different from the sum of the individuals who compose it. A crowd is an entity with a psychology of its own, and idiosyncrasies of character and conduct peculiar to itself. The nature of these is ably discussed by Sir Martin Conway in "The Crowd in Peace and War." The author has been a famous mountaineer in his time, and has conquered many a peak thought to be inaccessible. Now that his active days are over he has essayed the equally difficult task of exploring the mysteries of the mob-mind. "What is a crowd?" he asks. "What is the minimum number of persons that ceases to be a mere group of individuals?" The question is important, because individuals and crowds act on different motives. The former are swayed in the main by reason, the latter by emotion. It is, of course, impossible to draw a hard and fast line, for much depends on the education of the units, the circumstances of their meeting, and a hundred and one other things. But a rough-and-ready definition of a crowd is "a body too large for general conversation to be possible." It then necessarily becomes articulate only through the agency of someone who either dominates or interprets its feelings. Parliament is certainly a crowd—even a Cabinet is often a crowd, a jury of twelve acts as a crowd. In fact, "it is probable that that number has been in process of time arrived at because it is the minimum number that can be normally relied upon to act."

One is apt to speak disparagingly of crowds, though it is hard to see why this should be so. True, a crowd is governed by passion, not by judgment; but the passion may be a noble one. Esprit de corps is little more than crowd instinct disciplined and developed. A regiment of men, prone to human weakness, will endure the extremities of hardship and will die at its post rather than give in. Another regiment will abandon itself to the basest atrocities. All depends on the spirit that informs it. The author attributes the German bestialities to the manner in which the authorities skilfully played upon the crowd instinct of the soldiers. He makes allowance for a proportion of brutes and for a proportion of uncontrolled men who gladly took advantage of an occasion when sanctions were removed. But this hardly explains the conduct of the others, fathers of families, decent men who in their former life would have been incapable of the deeds that have for ever blackened German fame in France and Belgium. The fact of the matter is that they became part of a crowd, and were swept along in its orgiastic frenzy, which was accentuated by certain national traits, including a predisposition to violence. The author quotes from Mr. Moreton Frewen, who points out that "the more we read of German history the more we discover that the German nature aggregates dangerously; that the tendency of any German crowd is to be worse than its units." We need not have waited until 1914 to realise this. In 1807 the Duke of Wellington wrote the following words of an army then in alliance with us: "I can assure you that from the general of the Germans down to the smallest drummer boy in their legion the earth never groaned under such a set of murdering, worthless villains. They murdered, robbed, and illtreated the peasantry wherever they went." And the troops of the various nations that relieved the Embassies at Peking during the Boxer rebellion could tell a tale an' they would. That was the celebrated occasion when William II. gave the German contingent carte blanche to imitate Attila. But let no one assume airs of superiority towards the crowd as such; he is very often a member of a crowd himself. Few are so detached in spirit that they can escape the electrical discharge from their fellows around them. The ordinary audience at a theatre is a case in point. Even more cogent is the case of a political meeting, for there there is no adventitious circumstance of colour and glamour. Take up any newspaper and read the speech of the orator. It is punctuated with "laughter," "cheers," "applause." As Sir Martin Conway points out, the person who reads this speech in his own armchair may be wholly sympathetic with the sentiments; but he is certainly not moved to laughter, nor is "his enthusiasm so kindled as to make him stamp about the room or otherwise provide any muscular discharge for his feelings." In connection with politics, the author discusses the vexed question of two Houses, and puts his finger on the real, the only, and the compelling reason for a bi-cameral system. A Parliament responsible to public opinion is doubly a crowd, with the defects and the merits of a crowd. It is a crowd in itself, and it represents crowds. A second Chamber which reproduces these qualities is therefore superfluous. The raison d'être of a second Chamber is that it should express the individual rather than the crowd point of view. It can do this more effectively in proportion as its members are less directly accountable to any constituency. No doubt those who established and perpetuated irresponsible second Chambers were hardly actuated by scientific motives, but the psychologist agrees with them in principle, if not in intention. If you are going to have a second Chamber at all (and there are solid psychological reasons to his mind why you should) it must be formed on a radically different basis from the first. It must have security of tenure, and a chance to display its individuality. It may be composed of anarchists for all that the scientist cares. He is not preaching any political doctrine; he is merely concerned to emphasise a fact that underlies all government. Just as the old Teutonic tribes debated every matter twice, once when drunk and again when sober, so it is well for the nation to think in its dual capacity, as collection of units as well as a crowd.

The crowd is a mass of raw material powerful for evil or for good, a string that can vibrate to any note. Who are those that play the note? Sir Martin Conway divides them into three, the "crowd-compeller," the "crowd exponent," and the "crowd-representative." The "crowd-representative" is not really in a separate class. His is a formal role, but he may in addition, be a "compeller," or an "exponent." Examples of the "crowd representative" in its various possibilities are the King of the Belgians, the President of the United States, and the officials of a militant trades union. "Crowd compellers" are not very frequent, although "crowd exponents" abound. The great instance in literature of crowd compulsion is Marc Antony's speech over Cæsar's body. Caesar himself was a crowd compeller, and so, in more modern times, were Napoleon and Disraeli. Gladstone, on the other hand, was an admirable type of crowd exponent. The "crowd exponent" "feels by sympathetic insight and mere sensitiveness of nature as the crowd feels, or is going to feel, and who expresses in clear language the emotion of the dumb organism." He may, or may not, be insincere; he may, or may not, be a demagogue. The chances are that he is neither, for the crowd is a difficult proposition, and no attempt to interpret its moods can last long unless it proceeds from genuine, if unconscious, understanding. The names in the ordinary history book number a few "crowd compellers," but most of them are "crowd exponents." In our own times, Sir Martin Conway suggests, Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Winston Churchill are the outstanding examples of the type. (Longmans Green; G. Robertson.)

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

Not very long ago the question of closer Imperial organisation was an academic one. The Empire managed to get along well enough as things were, and those who contemplated any change thought of it in rather an abstract way. War has put an end to this attitude. The Empire has, in fact, by its deeds anticipated all those who merely thought or talked. Whatever the future holds, it is difficult to believe that intra-Imperial relations will be the same as they were before. The latest contribution to the discussion is "British Colonial Policy," by Mr. C. H. Currey. The book is interesting, not only for the solid information it gives, but also because it represents the point of view of an Australian who has reflected on the matter. Indeed, it is not necessary to agree with his conclusions to appreciate his work; the excellent thing is that our own people are beginning to think of the question and to write about it. It would be disastrous if we took our opinions ready made from Great Britain, and only by such discussion can we hope for any solution of the problem.

Mr. Curry's book is ambitious in scope though limited in compass. He sketches the history of the British Empire from 1783 to the present day. In 1782 the British Empire had followed the normal fate of all empires won by the sword. Assyria, Greece, Rome—one need not follow the melancholy tale—had all perished. In 1782 the average Briton might have thought that his own Empire had reached its zenith, and had begun its decline. The independence of the American colonies had stripped it bare. What had it left? A few starveling posts in Canada, with a disaffected population; a few tropical islands; a few forts here and there; even in India the power of "John Company" did not extend far beyond the range of its coast or its river factories. At this point, the nadir of British Imperialism, Mr. Currey takes up the tale. Britain was so disgusted with colonial enterprise that she refused to trouble herself about the colonies. Any fool was wise enough to attend to their trivial affairs, and hence arose the government of wide spaces by men of narrow minds. "Mr. Mother Country" was the type of official that controlled the colonies for a generation or more, the type that haunted independent Governors, and that cast a benign shadow over shady nominees and nepotistic nonentities. "Mr. Mother Country" was a national disaster, a suave, unapproachable gentleman who wore an uniform bound with red tape. Butler caricatured him well, but one wishes that Dickens had had the foresight to turn his attention to the Colonial Office instead of the Circumlocution Office.

This sort of thing could not go on. A movement for colonial self-government grew stronger and stronger both in the colonies and in the home country. Mr. Currey says that the sponsors of the movement in the home country were "the brilliant Radicals." One suspects that on this occasion their brilliance was not due to any desire to sparkle, but to a determination to get rid of the burdensome colonies at all costs. They thought that responsible government would be the beginning of national strivings. In this they were both right and wrong. They were right in that various parts of the Empire found that from their more intimate local knowledge they chose to deal with certain local problems on lines dictated by their own views. They were wrong if they thought that autonomy would incite anyone to the theatrical enterprise of "cutting the painter." Whatever the Empire's faults it has a residuum of common sense. In fact it is so shrewd that with all its talk of "nationality" it has never dreamed of existing without the protection of the British navy, and in the past has paid somewhat exiguously for this protection.

The third stage belongs to our own times. The colonies have become dominions; as dominions they have become capable of taking their part in the heat and burden of the day. This leads Mr. Currey to his final conclusions, which are more controversial. In these, one thinks, he is too dogmatic; at any rate, his inferences are too broad to be accepted. His theory is that the history of the Empire shows that Imperial unity can best be maintained by a "co-operative alliance" as against an Imperial federation. That may be so, but his arguments do not strike one as cogent. He cites the establishment of dominion navies as a symptom of tendencies; but these navies were put under Imperial control when the need for them arose. He has great faith in the value of Imperial conferences, though the cynic might say that all that these have achieved is the interchange of patriotic sentiment, graceful compliment, good entertainment, and better communications. He seems to suggest that a system of preferential tariffs plus Imperial conferences, will settle the whole thing—the millennium of the co-operative Imperial alliance. No one grudges Mr. Currey his optimism, but some will not share it. (Oxford University Press.)

AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN ATROCITIES.

We used to believe that the German armies held the supremacy in brutality, and that the Austrians were comparatively humane by contrast. That this opinion is wrong is amply proved by Dr. R. A. Reiss's "Austro-Hungarian Atrocities." The author is a Swiss professor who visited Servia after the two first invasions and held an exhaustive investigation into the behaviour of the invaders, particularly towards the civilian inhabitants. His report, which is modelled on that of the Bryce Commission, is a terrible indictment of the Austrian troops; indeed, it is clear that between the Germans and their allies there is little or nothing to choose. The report gains in effectiveness by the manner of its presentation. For the most part Dr. Reiss is content to let the facts speak for themselves; only occasionally does he add comment or explanation. Names, dates, and places are given, and there are numerous graphs and diagrams which indicate with scientific precision the nature of the atrocity and the sex and age of the victims.

These "cases," told in such restrained and detached language, are a terrible record of shame which the Austrians will never live down. Bad enough was the Austrians' treatment of the Servian soldiers, their slaughter of prisoners, their flagrant disregard of all international conventions. But still worse is the section that deals with the sufferings of the civilians at the hands of the Austrians. Page after page describes whole communities put to the sword, or burned alive, mutilations and tortures of every conceivable form, revolting cruelties that spared neither age nor youth, and that singled out women for peculiar horrors. The Austrians in Servia proved themselves apt imitators of the Germans in Belgium and France, they plumbed the depths of sheer bestiality. It requires literally a strong stomach to read of their exploits.

There can be no excuse for their conduct, but Dr. Reiss supplies its explanation. The Austrian authorities had decided—not to put too fine a point to it—on a war of extermination. They told the soldiery to expect no mercy from the Servians and to give none. That the butchery of the people was systematic and according to order is proved by the instructions found in the possession of the Austrian troops. These begin with the general statement that "in dealing with a population of this kind all humanity and kindness of heart are out of place, and are even harmful." They proceed to lay down special rules to be followed. Thus we read that "every inhabitant encountered in the open, and particularly in the woods, is to be considered a member of a band which has concealed its weapons somewhere, which weapons we have not the time to look for. These people are to be executed if they appear even slightly suspicious." This, adds Dr. Reiss, is an incitement to murder pure and simple. "Every man found in the fields is a comitadji who has to be killed. Truly it is difficult to believe that we live in the 20th century!" The Austrians have attempted to palliate their massacres by declaring that severe measures were taken only against franc-tireurs. But that does not account for the old women and the babes who form a substantial proportion of the victims. The facts are there, they admit of no evasion, and the worst feature of the thing is that these deeds were done when Austria's position in Servia was still precarious. What she is doing now that she is mistress of the situation can only be conjectured. (Simpkin Marshall.)

THE HERITAGE OF TYRE.

In the "Heritage of Tyre," Mr. William B. Meloney, an American, calls upon his fellow-countrymen to resume their rightful position on the ocean. Circumstances, he declares, have singled them out above all other lands as a nation of seafarers; through indolence and lack of enterprise they have allowed the trident to slip from their grasp; let them now take advantage of the conditions produced by the war to resume their rightful position on the ocean highways. Mr. Meloney claims that from the Napoleonic wars until the American Civil wars, the American mercantile marine was mistress of the seas. Her inexhaustible forest provided her with the raw material for building ships; her hardy fishermen from the New England coast developed a race of sailors unequalled in skill and endurance. In vain did other Powers endeavour by legislation, harbour dues, subsidies, and all sorts of jealous devices, to hamper American progress. The rakish Chesapeake clippers, built on the lines of the codfish, scooped the West Indian trade; bigger craft turned out from American yards with a tremendous spread of canvas and clean lines made for speed, snatched the East Indian trade out of the very hands of the English.

All this is true enough, but Mr. Meloney is rather unfortunate in his method of argument. In order to make the palmy days of American shipping the brighter, he finds it necessary to belittle British seamanship. He continually returns to this. Apparently, to his mind, the British can neither design ships, nor build them, nor man them when built, and the British sailorman is a somewhat useless individual who lacks resourcefulness, adaptability, and courage, and, in fact, knows very little about his job. This is rather an audacious proposition, even for an American to make. Britain has forgotten more about the sea than America ever knew, and if Britain is so lacking in the sea knack and America so proficient, how is one to account for the fact that for 50 years or more the British Navy and mercantile marine have been supreme while those of America have been of negligible importance.

But it is true that in their time American sailors have done fine things. As early as the eighteenth century the British penalised by taxation cargo carried from her colonies in any but British bottoms. To meet this, American enterprise devised the "Jew's raft"—a cargo of logs shackled together with chains in the semblance of a vessel's hull, and rigged according to necessity. These ungainly craft threshed and wallowed their way across the Atlantic, and past the reluctant but puzzled port officials. A Jew's raft could not be called a ship, nor yet a bottom. It was bottomless; it defied classification. A hundred years later the genius of Boston shipwrights invented a type of vessel that could show a clean pair of heels to anything afloat, and anything that was to float long after the age of steam. The distances logged by these boats in a day's run were often extraordinary. In 1853 the "Lightning," bound from Boston to Liverpool, covered 436 miles in twenty-four hours—an average of over eighteen knots an hour. It was thirty-one years before an ocean-going merchant steamer equalled that day's work. The British were not too proud to take a lesson from such flyers. They built in imitation of their models, and, when they could, bought the originals. Many of the famous Black Ball liners, which cut out the journey from England to Australia in record time in the 'Fifties and 'Sixties, had originally been American ships. Mr. Meloney is indignant at their transference to the British flag, but when all is said and done it avails little to have a genius for navigation unless one makes use of it, and it is unfair to wax rancorous against Britain because she has profited by American indolence. (Macmillan.)

NEW NOVELS.

Those who remember "The Thirty-Nine Steps," by Mr. John Buchan, will need little persuasion to make them read "Greenmantle." This, though a sequel to the other book, is complete in itself. The British authorities have got wind of a German scheme that involves the East. They can only guess what it is, but think that it has something to do with the proclamation of a holy war; they know somehow or other that it is being shaped in Constantinople; but the only clue to its solution that they possess is a meaningless sentence dropped from the lips of a dying intelligence officer. However, it is vital that its nature should be discovered, and three men are chosen for the mission. One of these is our old friend, Hannay, now recovering from wounds gained at the front; another is a certain M. Blenkiron, an American, who describes himself as a "benevolent neutral," and interprets the term very liberally; the third is a Scotsman with a Burtonesque knowledge of the language and manners of the Orient and a Burtonesque faculty for disguise. Each sets out for Constantinople by a different route and gets there by characteristic means. Mr. Blenkiron fulminates against the Allies, and makes himself so objectionable that he is finally deported by the British authorities, received in Germany as an honoured guest, and conveyed to Turkey in a train de luxe. Sandy takes Port Said for his jumping-off place, disappears in the Levant, and after a space turns up in Constantinople as the founder and head of a new religious order. Hannay, who can talk the Taal, decides that his best role is that of a seditious Boer who has fought in the rebellion with Maritz, and has come to Germany to offer his services against the hated Briton. With this intention he goes to Lisbon, and there falls in with Peter, an old Boer hunter, who decides to share his fortunes. At first all goes well, but before long troubles begin to fall thick and fast upon them. They are recognised, but by a succession of lucky chances manage to get down the Danube in a barge laden with munitions for Turkey. At first it seems to be a case of out of the frying pan into the fire, for Hannay falls foul of a disagreeable "Young Turk," by refusing baksheesh. Eventually the travellers meet at their rendezvous, and are speeded further on their odyssey by the mysterious lady who holds the secret of "green mantle." There follows a series of extraordinary adventures in the wilds of Asia Minor, from which, needless to say, they eventually emerge with their task accomplished. Mr. Buchan has written a most stirring yarn, which once begun, one can hardly lay down. It is no mere story of incident, though there is incident and to spare of the most sensational variety. The characterisation is excellent: Peter Peinaar, the big game hunter, is an admirable person, and so is the benevolent "neutral" who fears nothing in the world except his own duodenum. The impressions of Germany and Turkey in war time ring true, and the campaign on the mountain tops which culminated in the fall of Erzerum is most vividly described. Further, one notices that Mr. Buchan avoids the common error of underrating the ability and character of the enemy. (Hodder and Stoughton.)

Sir Gilbert Parker has chosen for the setting of "The World For Sale" the French-Canadian provinces, which he has so successfully exploited in earlier works. But he has introduced a new element in the vagrant King of the Romany race who has withdrawn from the gipsies and come to Canada for the sake of his vow. The mystery that surrounds Gabriel Druse, the Romany King, affects the love affairs of Freda, his daughter. Freda continually feels the pull of the old careless, lawless roving past, but she is determined to have done with it for ever. Her resolution is made the more difficult because of her Romany entanglements and the perseverance of her various gorgio wooers. Marchand is a thoroughgoing rogue, but he displays a certain unscrupulous efficiency in the prosecution of his plans. Max Ingolby has all the virtues, and no one will grudge him his good luck. The subordinate characters play their parts capably; the details are as good as ever; the mis-en-scene is as carefully described and as effective as ever. But Sir Gilbert Parker would probably be the first to admit that he has written better stories than this one. (Heinemann).

ANZAC MEMORIAL.

The second edition of the Anzac Memorial Book has been published, the first having proved such a success that it brought the Returned Soldiers' Association as proprietor and publisher £600 profits from April to November. The book is handsomely bound in red morocco, and has been characterised by the librarian of the Mitchell Library as "a book of perpetual Australasian historic and literary interest." Over 11,000 copies of the publication have been sold, and the new edition makes the thirteenth thousand.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

A confirmed playgoer of this city now proposes a discursive ramble amongst the New York playhouses. He remarks that "in the finish of the acting, and the subtle character of its humour, 'The Boomerang' was probably the best play of its year in New York. 'The Great Lover,' by Leo Dietrichstein, who played lead, was pronounced a purely feminine attraction. The men as a rule only went to see it, as they did to other shows, because of the inimitable parody in Cohan's Revue. This entertainment is in a class by itself. Cleverly arranged, and scored, and mounted, and extraordinarily clever people engaged, it is the funniest entertainment in two hemispheres, and without a coarse or vulgar allusion. The trial scene in 'Common Clay,' carried out in syncopated time, scenes from 'The Boomerang,' 'The Great Lover,' and 'Hit-the-Trail Holliday,' were wonderfully amusing. In fact, this revue could almost keep a bad play going. I did not care about 'Hit-the-Trail Holliday,' in which Fred Niblo was still appearing. 'Fair and Warmer' was very funny, but purely local in its application. 'Cheating Cheaters' and 'Nothing but the Truth' have, I understand, been bought by Mr. Hugh Ward for Australia. They should both succeed. Willie Collier was starring in the latter in the same vein of quiet humour which delighted us all some years ago, and I was glad to see once more Rappley Holmes of 'Squaw Man' fame, whose new part, that of a huge and truculent stockbroker, fitted him like a glove.

"The Little Theatre deserves a note to itself. This is the pet lamb of Mr. Winthrop Ames, who has ample means to indulge his artistic tastes. It has only 299 seats. This avoids the heavy tax for theatres with a seating capacity of 300 and over. Towards the end of September I saw there 'Hush,' a comedy by an unknown writer. Practically it was a tract, demanding some frankness in respect to the phenomenon of child-birth. I saw it at the dress rehearsal, and the audience behaved excellently. But after the Press view, which precedes the first presentation to the public, the newspapers fell upon 'Hush' with great violence, and I expect it died young. The Hippodrome is a bright spot in New York, operated by Charles M. Dillingham, who ranks with George M. Cohan as one of the big men in metropolitan theatredom. Those who saw the ladder of roses in 'So Long, Letty,' in Sydney can form some idea of the Hippodrome stage when I mention that the same feature over there was one and a half times as high and about four times as wide. In some of the scenes there were 500 or 600 people. One 'act' was a replica of the Hall of Jewels at the San Francisco Exhibition, with Sousa's Band playing in the foreground a march of the State—16 girls, representing each State, filing past; the background graced by 300 or 400 spectators, each one properly drilled in his or her part. By the way, G. M. Cohan hit off this feature in his revue with a band of 50 Sousas, each one imitating the bandmaster's well-known gestures. I saw a number of Australians, who were doing well. Bert Levy, the caricaturist, has a steady all-the-year job in the Orpheum Circuit, so has Albert Whelan. Miss Doris Barnett is working at the School of Music as the 'right-hand man' of Godowsky, who has the reputation of one of the greatest of living pianists and teachers. Cyril Keightley was in 'Cheating Cheaters.' Willie Collier, Fred. Niblo, and quite a number of Americans known to Australians were quite well, thank you!"

The Austral String Quartet will give the final concert of the year at the Conservatorium next Friday, and this will form its last appearance as a corporate body. Mr. Cyril Monk formed this quartet, of which he has been the leader throughout, about seven years ago, with Anton Tschaikov (violin), S. Vost Janssen (viola), and Gladstone Bell ('cello), the first and last of whom were soon replaced by Alfred Hill (violin) and Carl Gotsch ('cello). Various other changes were made, which brought in Mr. Louis d'Hage in place of Mr. Hill, but Mr. Monk's main object "to keep alight the sacred flame of chamber music," was happily realised. It may not be generally known that from earliest times the musicians who have directed and maintained these quartets have done so primarily for the love of art. Right back from the periods when Josef Kretschmann, Horace Poussard, and the Pleyel Quartet (1897), headed by Henri Staell to the present-day of the lastnamed artist's Salon Quartet, and the Salon Trio, led by Miss Dorothy Curtis, chamber music at the best has barely paid its way. Mr. Monk, at the end of seven years, finds that he has just cleared expenses. He is now retiring, not so much for financial reasons as owing to the difficulty of finding artists who will consistently sacrifice the time needed for rehearsals. The whole subject, with a record of the wide fields covered by the Monk Quartet in classic music of all countries, including Australian, and the advanced French and Russian composers, is interestingly treated in a programme review signed "A. L. K." It is obvious that the labours of Mr. Monk and his predecessors have cultivated and prepared the audiences now supporting with appreciative warmth the more perfect Verbrugghen Quartet. This merely illustrates what Henrik Ibsen described as "the inevitable law of change." The Austral Quartet now becomes, as the preface in question terms it, "an honoured memory," and one always to be recalled with gratitude and pleasure.

In discussing musical affairs in New York, Miss Kate Rooney (Mrs. W. Kirkham) explains that this great city does not represent American life, but seems to be a thing apart, cosmopolitan, and more than usually restless even than the busiest of the mighty cities with which the United States are dotted. The Sydney contralto, who arrived here on a holiday visit by the Ventura after six years' absence, describes the concert-world of London as much more restful and studious. She saw a great deal of it during a residence of some ten or twelve years, during most of which time she was the principal contralto at the fashionable Ranelagh Club. Eventually, her husband decided to open an art gallery for antique furniture, of the Tudor and Queen Anne periods in New York, where they have now lived three years. Kate Rooney misses there the middle-class English audiences which so faithfully support the oratorios, the orchestral societies, the sacred and miscellaneous concerts of the Sunday League, the Queen's Hall Promenades, the ballad concerts, and similar institutions which cater for people of some cultivation, but only moderate means. There is no lack of first-rate music in New York, however, for those who can afford it. The Metropolitan Opera House performances are splendid, many of the world's great singers appearing regularly, but the productions involve a scenic magnificence which distracts attention from the music, and real lovers of the art prefer a more simple mounting. All the stars appear at the Biltmore Hotel Morning Concerts, and whereever else the tariff is at "boiling point," and some of them occasionally appear at the Women's Clubs. Miss Rooney considers these clubs, the St. Cecilia, the Beethoven, the Rubinstein, singularly weak as regards actual performance, but there are a great many of them, more than 40, and they form an excuse for social gatherings outside the home—and your true-bred New Yorker is never inside it except after midnight! Miss Rooney's professional appearances included the creation of the contralto role in Carpenter's setting of Tagore's poems with the Hindostanee Society, and with the Clan-na-gael Society at New York, Pittsburg, and Newhaven. At the Central Opera House, the contralto sang in Gaelic Irish folk-songs with the Irish Plays Society, and she appeared at various concerts both in New York and Boston.

Christmas and New Year attractions at the theatres are now definitely fixed as follows:—"The Cinema Star," at Her Majesty's, December 23; the farce, "Fair and Warmer," Criterion, December 26; "Peg o' My Heart," Palace, December 23; "The Bunyip" pantomime at the Grand Opera House, Friday, December 22; and "The Passing Show," continued at the Tivoli.

MR. HARRY INGHAM, Oxford-street, Woollahra, says:—"I had a bad attack of rheumatism, and tried several medicines uselessly, until I tried your Clements Tonic. I took four large bottles, and am as well as ever I was in my life."—Advt.

IN THE GARDEN.

SHRUBBY ERYTHRINAS.

Several of the shrubby erythrinas, sometimes called "coral plants," are now a mass of bloom, and forming an attractive sight in some gardens. These profusely flowering shrubs attain a height of from 5ft to 7ft or more, have ornamental foliage, and long terminal stems, on which are disposed numerous large, pea-shaped flowers, varying in colour from coral-red to bright scarlet. These handsome shrubs do best in the warmer districts, in a position fully exposed to the sun, but sheltered from prevailing winds. Erythrina crista-galli, however, although indigenous to Brazil, can be successfully grown in the cooler parts with slight protection during the winter months. There are several varieties of this very fine species, differing chiefly in the colour of their flowers. All the coral plants thrive in well-drained, deeply-worked, good soil, but do well in any friable, fertile ground. They produce an exceedingly fine effect when grown amongst shrubs of a similar height having white flowers or variegated foliage. They also make a fine display when judiciously planted at intervals in the borders or grown as isolated specimens on lawns. The removal of each stem as soon as it ceases flowering will result in the development of lateral growths, which will produce flowers later in the season. In order to ensure great floriferousness in established shrubs the growths made during the summer should be cut back to within one or two buds (eyes) of their bases in winter. That will result not only in a number of new shoots from the main stem in spring, but in the development of many flowering stems. These erythrinas are easily cultivated shrubs, and require only ordinary attention. Plants that are well established in pots may now be set in the positions where they are to grow.

THE SHOWY SALPIGLOSSIS.

Few summer and autumn flowering annuals produce more showy and exquisitely coloured flowers than the newer varieties of salpiglossis, particularly the Grandiflora superbissima strain. These plants grow about 18 inches high, have large, funnel-shaped flowers, many of which are delicately and richly veined in most brilliant colours, whilst others are striped and flaked in a remarkable manner. The species is a native of Chili, and, like many of the beautiful flowering plants of that country, thrives in the Australian climate. All the varieties of salpiglossis are easily cultivated annuals, and grow to perfection in a position fully exposed to the sun, and sheltered from the wind. They thrive in deep, light, rich soil, but do well in ground of a friable nature. Seedlings that have been raised from seed sown earlier in the season should now be sufficiently forward to be successfully transplanted to the positions where they are to flower. These plants can hardly be misplaced in the borders, but they produce the most gorgeous effect in bloom when grown in masses. If cultivated in this way, or in rows, the seedlings should be planted about 15 inches apart, to allow the plants to grow into good flowering specimens. Beyond freely watering the seedlings in dry, hot weather, until they become established in their positions, only occasional attention is necessary. The cut flowers can be kept quite fresh in water for four or five days during the hottest weather, and they are admirably adapted for dining or drawing room decoration.

NOTES.

In the neighbourhood of the metropolis several very fine specimens of the Cape chestnut, Calodendron capensis, are now literally covered with richly-coloured, pinkish heliotrope flowers, making an attractive display. This handsome, umbrageous, evergreen tree is well worth planting in a prominent position in every park and large garden in the coast districts. It thrives in a sunny and sheltered situation, in any deep good soil. Plants that are well established in pots may now be set in the positions where they are to grow.

The newer varieties of hydrangea, referred to in this column last year, are now flowering most profusely, and some remarkably well-grown specimens with immense clusters of flowers are to be seen in several metropolitan and suburban gardens. It will assist the plants in keeping the flowers in a perfect condition for a considerable time if copious and regular supplies of water are given at the roots in dry weather; indeed, unless this is done the flowering period will be considerably curtailed. If the ground in which the plants are growing is not rich an occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots will prove beneficial. Hydrangeas that are being grown in pots or tubs for indoor or verandah decoration should also receive similar attention in the way of watering.

Now that most varieties of that section of carnation known as "spring bloomers" have ceased flowering for this season, they may be be layered if it is desired to increase any particular variety. Layers that are put down now will, with an occasional good watering, grow into vigorous plants by autumn, and then if carefully transplanted and cultivated will produce flowers next spring. Around each plant it is proposed to increase, place fairly rich light soil to the depth of 3 inches for the layers to root in. Select only healthy vigorous growths for layering, and after preparing each one embed it well into the compost, and keep it in position with a hooked wooden peg. The lower non-flowering shoots of any other type of carnation may be similarly treated.

In dry, hot weather established cannas must be liberally supplied with water at the roots, and have the foliage hosed occasionally, to keep them in a vigorous, healthy condition, and to assist the plants in producing a profusion of their extraordinarily showy flowers. If the ground in which they are growing is not rich, an occasional watering of fairly strong liquid manure will greatly benefit the plants. The flowering period will be prolonged if the old worn-out stems are removed as soon as the blooms have faded.

Where it is desired to keep the double-flowering African and French marigolds and zinnias true to type the plants should now receive occasional attention. Seedlings raised from the best double-flowering strains produce a certain percentage of plants having single flowers. Such growths should be carefully cut out, for they will not only detract from the general effect, but seeds saved from neglected plants will when sown produce a much larger percentage of single flowers and keep deteriorating.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.

The occasional showers that have fallen during the past few weeks have been very favourable for the growth of vegetables, and the summer crops are now in a flourishing condition. More seeds of the dwarf and tall French or kidney beans, butter beans, and Lima beans may now be sown, so that there will be no break in the continuity of supplies of these excellent vegetables.

Cabbage and cauliflower seeds may now be largely sown to provide plants for the autumn and winter crops. On seed beds composed of light soil, that have been well prepared and brought to a fine tilth, sow the seeds thinly and evenly on the surface, and leave them only lightly covered with vegetable mould or thoroughly decayed waste from the stables. Then water the bed through a fine rose watering can, and continue doing this two or three times a week in dry, hot weather. The resulting seedlings must never be allowed to suffer from the want of moisture at the roots, or they will become stunted in growth. Amongst the best varieties of cabbage for general cropping are East Ham, West Ham, Enfield Market, London Market, St. John's Day, Succession, and Sugar-loaf. Some very good varieties of cauliflower are Early London, Large Asiatic, Veitch's Autumn Giant, White Queen, and Walcheren.

In drills sow seeds of beet, carrot, parsnip, spinach, sweet corn or table maize, swede and white turnips, and in the cooler districts culinary peas. In prepared seed beds sow seeds of broccoli, Brussels sprouts, Cape gooseberry, capsicum, celery, kale or borecole, kohl-rabi, and tomato. On low mounds composed of rich soil sow for succession more seeds of cucumber, rock melon, squash, and vegetable marrow. Continue to sow at intervals for salad, cress, lettuce, mustard, onion, and radish. Celery and leek that are being grown for early supplies should be liberally watered at the roots in dry weather, otherwise the plants will be likely to go prematurely to seed.

Many of the early planted tomatoes are carrying good crops of fruit, and should receive occasional attention. The leading growths should be kept tied to their supports, and all the superfluous and weakly ones should be cut out. The plants will be benefited if the ground about their roots is well mulched with waste from the cowyard. In dry weather watering should be on a liberal scale, so as to ensure a heavy yield of fine samples. More tomato seedlings may now be planted to provide succession crops, also sweet potato cuttings, according to the directions previously given.

Plant eschalots, potato, and tree onions, on deeply worked, rich, sandy soil if good results are desired. The separated bulbs of the first named should be planted singly four inches apart, in rows one foot apart, and left only lightly covered with soil. The other two crops will require a little more room to grow successfully, and must be more deeply planted. Onions that are being grown for their bulbs should, as soon as their tops turn yellow, be pulled, allowed to dry in the sun for a few hours, and then cleaned of all extraneous matter, including the tops, before storing them for future use.

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

"Tony, there is a message from Mrs. Redburn—she wants you to go up to the Priory at once; she cannot manage any sitting tomorrow, and she asks if you can go this morning instead. She has to motor to town this afternoon. Why, Hilary, my dear, how flushed you look—you are sure you are not feeling feverish or anything?"

"Not in the least," Hilary laughed, and flushed still more deeply. "I—I think I am rather warm. I need not take down my hair, then, need I?" She glanced swiftly at Tony, and glanced as swiftly away again. "There will be no time to paint if you are just going to Mrs. Redburn?"

"I should like to say a good many things not fit for the ears of ladies," Tony answered, smiling grimly. "I do not want to go to the Priory. I do not in the least wish to paint Mrs. Redburn. I am fed up with her."

"My dear Tony." This from Miss Dunbar.

"Yes, Aunt Alice," he repeated, "fed up with her. Another piece of slang I recommend to you as a neat and useful way of expressing a particular meaning. If I were a rich and independent painter, I should disregard Mrs. Redburn's message, and send back word to say that my morning was already fully occupied. As I can't afford to throw away Mr. Joe Redburn's money, I shall have to go.

"It will be like painting an icicle instead of a living ray of sunlight," he added, when Miss Dunbar had left the studio, and he and Hilary were once more alone.

"Then you will not want me any more this morning," the girl answered, ignoring his words, and making towards the door. "I will go and take Babs out for Miss Dunbar, and get my packing done."

"And I will paint you this afternoon," Tony called out to her as she made her escape. "I am going to immortalise your sunshine on my canvas."

Hilary fled without making a reply, but his words rang in her heart while she walked along the lanes with baby Babs, whilst she packed her clothes into her box in the room that during the past few weeks had grown so homelike and so dear.

"You carry the sunshine with you"—"It will be like painting an icicle after painting a living ray of sunlight"—"I shall immortalise your sunshine on my canvas."

Each phrase in turn spoken rang through Hilary's heart, making it sing for joy, not only because of the words themselves, wonderful as they seemed to her, but because of the new and tender cadences in Tony's voice which, even when she was quite alone, set her pulses throbbing, and her face flushing, and brought a new, soft radiance into her eyes.

CHAPTER XV.
THE PACKET.

"What have you done to yourself? You look different. Oh, I don't know quite what it is about you," Anstice ended, putting her hands on Hilary's shoulders and looking deep into her eyes. "Have you grown much younger or much older since I left you at Torpsley?"

"I don't know," Hilary laughed. "Certainly I am a few weeks older, but——"

"But me no buts," Anstice interrupted gaily. "I won't worry you by digging down to see how your roots are growing. They are evidently sprouting quite nicely. Did you think me a wretch for asking you to come and keep me company? But I was on the verge of having an attack of the blues, and I did not feel I could face that. My brother does not appear at all. He is really very seedy just now, and he has shut himself up in his own special rooms in the west wing. I go and look him up two or three times a day, but he does not come out of his fastness, as I call it. And yet he likes to feel I am in the house. And it is so big for one small woman. I don't want to be disagreeable to Luke, but I confess I do sometimes hanker after my own pretty flat."

Hilary looked round the big drawing-room and there was a shadow of awe in her eyes.

"Of course, I haven't ever lived in huge rooms like this," she said. "I never saw anything like it until I went the other day to the Priory. Why, the sitting-room mother and I lived in would have got into this one ever so many times over. And fancy having windows at each end, and two fireplaces," she added naively.

"Thank goodness, our ancestors had the gumption to build two fireplaces," Anstice exclaimed. "If they had confined us to only one, we should have perished with cold. This room would be simply Arctic in winter without two roaring fires"

"And the furniture," Mrs. Derfield went on, with a shudder. "My sister-in-law, poor dear, had early Victorian tastes. Any additions she made to the already prehistoric furniture of this room have all been on Victorian lines. The very chintzes make me feel ill. And yet, it is of no use to suggest changes to my brother. He will go aboard as soon as he is well enough. The house will be shut up again, and what is the use of making drastic alterations?"

"What a pity," Hilary looked out of the window at the undulating park, and the stretch of landscape beyond. "It seems so mournful to have to shut up a great house like this, where so many people could live and be happy."

Anstice was struck by the phrase Hilary had used, "It seems so mournful," and the truth of the words came to her with sudden force. When she thought of it, there was no doubt it was mournful to shut up a big house with its store of treasures handed down from generation to generation. It certainly was mournful, and the more she thought of it the more pathetic it was to reflect that there were no children to play in the nurseries upstairs and in the great, rambling garden; no clear little voices, no childish laughter, to echo along the corridors, no childish feet to patter over the floors, and run across the lawns. Yes, it was mournful. And poor Carrie had been inadequate in this respect as in so many others. She had failed to give Luke an heir.

"The house will not be mournful now you are in it," Anstice said after that interlude of thought; "you bring a happy atmosphere with you. I wonder how you do it?" She had drawn Hilary down upon a couch covered with a chintz where large roses sprawled vaguely amongst large parrots. "You must have had very happy influences about you, all your life, and yet—your mother had so much sorrow."

"Mother loved me such a lot," Hilary said. "I believe that is why I can't help feeling happy inside me, even when things outside are sad. Mummy used to say that she wanted to wrap me round with love, to soak me in it. She believed that if people are loved ever so much when they are children they carry some of the love with them out into the world all their lives."

"I believe your mother was right. She must have been a very wise, as well as a very sweet, woman."

"Dr. Harding wrote to tell me he has been to mother's old home," Hilary said eagerly. "He said he would like to see me and tell me all about it. I wish—I do wish he would find out something about my father's people, something about my father himself."

"I don't think Dr. Harding has quite given up hope of being able to trace Mr. Donaldson, though so far it has been quite impossible. He is coming here to-day to see you—a formal, guardians' visit. I shall leave you in state together in the library, and then I shan't be in the way, and you can lodge any complaints against me if you wish to complain."

"As if I could ever wish such a thing," Hilary exclaimed affectionately. "I can't begin to say enough 'thank-yous' to you and to Sir Luke for all your goodness."

"By the way, my brother does not even know you are in the house. Very little upsets him, nowadays, and I did not want to recall all that happened at the time of the motor accident. He felt it so acutely. As a matter of fact, I don't think you and he are likely to come across each other at all. He hardly ever leaves the west wing, and if he does, he avoids this part of the house as if it were plague-stricken."

When Harding was shown into the library an hour or so later, he found his ward there alone, and he was conscious of a little rush of disappointment. Hitherto his visits to the Hall had been associated in his mind with the small dainty personality of the Squire's sister, and though he would not have owned it to himself in so many words, the thought of her had been in his mind during his walk from the village.

"Mrs. Derfield is out?" he questioned, and Hilary, with some newly found power of observation, detected disappointment in his voice.

"No, she is not out. But she is always so considerate, so thoughtful—she said I was to come into the library and hear from you all about my mother, and what you found out in the village where mother's people lived. She thought it would be pleasanter for me if I saw you alone. Mrs. Derfield never forgets all the little kindly, tactful things other people so often forget."

The Theatrical Employees' Union has made a very generous donation through their president, Mr. Sam. White, to the Joan of Arc committee's movement to give toys to children of fallen soldiers. They have promised to work the show from the front of the house to the back at the matinee performance of "The Buckle o' His Shoe" at the Criterion Theatre on December 16, and will present their cheque back to the fund. The Premier and Mrs. Holman and the Minister for Lands and Mrs. Ashford have added their patronage to the already influential list.

THE MOST FASCINATING STORIES IN THE WORLD.

In all the pages of literature of the world no stories possess a more enthralling interest than the legends and folk stories that have been handed down amid the traditions of every race. Preserved in ancient manuscripts, chiselled on monuments of stone, these wonderful legends represent the first imaginative efforts of a primitive people, and they reach us to-day mellowed by time and embellished by the loving art of the poets and historians of two thousand years and more. In many cases they represent the first attempts of thinking people to discover some clue to the secrets of nature. In their first essence they were really an attempt to provide a religion and a guide to life, but as they reach us to-day they have grown into the form of a literature of greater interest than the work of any novelist or poet.

THE FIRST WORK OF ITS KIND.

This beautiful series is the first work of its kind ever issued. It is the first attempt to bring within the covers of a single work the great legends and folk stories of the famous races of the world. We have here, in fact, written in the simple language that could alone be in keeping with such [illegible], material that formed the literature of the ancients.

To teachers in particular the tremendous [illegible] value of these stories will immediately be obvious; to writers, to ministers, and speakers—and, indeed, to every educated man—this value is just as great.

But, after all, this practical value is a small advantage compared to the wonderful fount of [illegible] reading that the stories provide. It is a [illegible] that should occupy a prominent place in every household where growing children are to be found; it should have just as important a place on the shelf of the adult reader. No work can be so depended upon for the passing of an evening hour. No purchase can ever be so little regretted.

Myths of Greece and Rome.
Myths and Legends of the Middle Ages.
Myths of Mexico and Peru.
Myths and Legends of Japan.
Myths of the North American Indians.
Myths of the Norsemen.
Hero Myths and Legends of the British Race.
Myths and Legends of the Celtic Race.
Myths and Legends of Hindus and Buddhists.
Myths and Legends of Ancient Egypt.

Exquisitely illustrated by such masters as [illegible], Leighton, Burne-Jones, Byam Shaw, Kaulbach, [illegible], etc., etc., written with superb grace and [illegible] by just those men who have made special study of the subject.

For grown-ups, a series to revel in for its [illegible] beauty of writing and illustrating; for children [illegible] fancy and delightful thought. For [illegible] young folk, perfect as a means of educating them in literature and art, widening their knowledge and imagination, and giving them the interest [illegible].

We have issued a beautifully illustrated booklet, ILLUSTRATED IN COLOUR—giving full particulars of these ten volumes. It is yours free if you send the coupon, which tells you how, for a first payment of 5/ and a few monthly payments, we will immediately send you the whole set.

ART IN AUSTRALIA.

The first number of "Art in Australia," a new production of more than ordinary interest, will be issued in Sydney next week. The aim of the promoters is a high one, and deserves encouragement. By means of first-class reproductions of the work of Australian artists, they hope to stimulate a greater local interest in Australian art and to convey some idea of it abroad. Colour printing has improved considerably during the last few years, and it is now possible to get adequate reproductions of paintings, as was proved by the books on J. J. J. Hilder, F. McCubbin, and Ida Rentoul. In appearance "Art in Australia" will resemble the Hilder memorial volume, which met with a pronounced success, the whole edition being sold out on the day of publication. The first number of the new magazine will contain articles on pictures by Hilder, Streeton, Julian Ashton, W. M'Innes, Norman Lindsay, Florence Rodway, John Shirlow, Norman Carter, Gruner, Lionel Lindsay, and Heysen. The editors and publishers are Messrs. S. Ure Smith, Bertram Stevens, and C. L. Jones. It is proposed to issue the magazine at intervals of six months, and the number of each edition will be limited.

FOR MOSQUITO BITES, WASP OR BEE STINGS, nothing allays the irritation so quickly as SCRUBB'S AMMONIA. Sold by all Grocers and Chemists. Avoid injurious imitations. Price in FREE BOTTLE.—Advt.

RED CROSS RECORD.

The Christmas number of the "Red Cross Record," which has just been published, contains interesting accounts, with a number of illustrations, of the various activities of the great organisation that is doing so noble a work. There is a message from Lady Edeline Strickland, president of the New South Wales division of the society, in which she expresses warm appreciation of the work the women have done. It is mentioned incidentally that the number of garments sent to our men from New South Wales by the society from November 30, 1914, to June 30, 1916, amounted to 759,385, while the money expended during the same period in providing for the sick and wounded totalled [illegible]. There are messages of comfort and hope from [illegible] Archbishop Wright, Archbishop [illegible] and the heads of most of the other denominations. Reports are given of the work of each of the country branches. Among the contributors to this special issue are Dorothea Mackellar, with a poem entitled "On Kelly's Ridge," Ruth M. Bedford ("A Christmas Hymn"), and Ella McFadyen ("Three Gifts"). The "Record" is on sale at the modest price of threepence.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice, Sir Samuel Griffith; Mr. Justice Barton, Mr. Justice Isaacs, Mr. Justice Duffy, and Mr. Justice Rich.)

SUGAR PRODUCERS' APPEAL.

DECISION RESERVED.

The Court reserved judgment in the appeal by the Sugar Producers' Association, Limited, against the refusal of the Supreme Court of Queensland to make absolute a prohibition restraining the respondents—the Australian Workers' Union—and the Queensland Industrial Court from further proceeding on an award made by Acting Judge Dickson on August 29 last.

(Before the Chief Justice, Sir Samuel Griffith; Mr. Justice Barton, Mr. Justice Isaacs, and Mr. Justice Rich.)

INTERPRETATION OF A WILL.

The appeal by Michael John Carroll against the decision of Mr. Justice Simpson, Chief Judge in Equity, in the suit brought by the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, against Joseph Thomas Bowes and the appellant, delivered on May 27, 1915, with reference to the interpretation of the will and codicil of the late Johanna White, of Burwood, is still part heard.

SUPREME COURT.

BANCO COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice and a jury of four.)

ACTION ON A COVENANT.

Fong v Gunn.

Mr. Bignold, instructed by Mr. Herbert Smith, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Crawford, instructed by Mr. William Arnott, for the defendant. This was an action brought by Richard Fong against Jakov Gunn to obtain possession of a shop occupied by defendant at premises at 17 Campbell-street, Manning-square, Sydney (known as Hippodrome Block), owing, as the plaintiff alleged, to a breach by the defendant of a covenant of the lease, which entitled him to bring an action of ejectment. It appeared, according to plaintiff's case, that a man named Martin occupied a portion of the block in Manning-square, and had a permit or license from the City Council, from whom the shops were leased, to sell soft drinks there exclusively. Plaintiff sublet 17 Campbell-street in the same block to Gunn, and one of the conditions of the sub-lease was that Gunn was not to show, sell, or advertise for sale any soft drinks; but plaintiff said that he broke this term of the agreement.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, but defendant was allowed till Saturday week to vacate the premises.

NO. 1 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of 4.)

ACTION FOR SLANDER.

Nicholls v Daws.

Mr. P. Halse Rogers and Mr. Davidson, instructed by Mr. George Davidson, of Mudgee (by his agent, Mr. Frederick H. Greaves), appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Windeyer, instructed by Mr. E. R. Abigail, for defendant. This was an action brought by Laura Nicholls, a married women, residing at Portland, against Simmie Jane Daws, another married woman, also residing at Portland, in which the latter was charged with having falsely and maliciously spoken words of the plaintiff attributing to her certain acts of impropriety. Damages were laid at £400. Defendant pleaded not guilty. His Honor, in placing the facts before the jury, remarked that it was a trivial case to bring into the Supreme Court.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, with damages, one farthing.

NO. 2 JURY COURT.

In the action Dank v Thomson, before Mr. Justice Sly and a jury of four, arising out of a dispute about the building of a house, the evidence was closed, but the addresses of counsel were not finished.

IN CHAMBERS.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

A QUESTION UNDER THE TICK ACT.

Re K. E. W. Ellis (R. de La B. Hill and others respondents.)

Mr. Mocatta, instructed by Mr. J. P. Tillett (Crown Solicitor), appeared for Knox Edward William Ellis, supervising inspector of stock at Lismore, in support of an appeal from the decision of Mr. A. J. Peisley, P.M., in a proceeding before him at Kyogle in which appellant was the complainant and R. de La Bare Hill, Annie Hill, and Mary Hill were respondents. Mr. Loxton, K.C., and Mr. Davidson, instructed by Mr. E. I. Ropkins, of Kyogle (by his agents, Messrs. Garland, Seaborn, and Abbott), appeared for the respondents in support of the order appealed against.

His Honor, having heard argument, said the defendants were prosecuted for neglecting to muster stock for examination, as required by regulation 18 (a) of the Diseases in Stock (Tick) Act of 1914. At the hearing objection was taken by the solicitor for the defendants that there was no evidence of any necessity to muster, and no evidence of any inquiry as to the necessity for a muster or examination, and that as the inspector had shown no reasonable cause for a muster the defendants were justified in refusing to muster, because it was impossible to carry it out. He thought the evidence pointed to the necessity of a muster, because the stock required to be mustered were within the quarantine area, and the necessity for examination was that the inspector had reason to suspect that the stock were infected. He did not think that the order could be said to have been unreasonable, or that defendants were justified in neglecting to comply with it. He was, therefore, of opinion that the magistrate's decision was erroneous in law, and it must be set aside, and the case remitted to the magistrate with that intimation, so that, if necessary, further evidence might be taken. The same decision would apply to a second case of a similar kind. Defendants to pay the costs of the appeal.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

ORDER AGAINST EXECUTOR.

Flannery v Burke.

This was an originating summons taken out by David Flannery and Sarah Belinda Quinn, both of Marrickville, for whom Mr. Nicholas, instructed by Messrs. Andrews and Manning, appeared. There was no appearance for the defendant, Michael Burke, of Wanstead, Tempe, dairyman and contractor. The plaintiff, D. Flannery, and the defendant, are co-executors of the will of Thomas Quinn, who died in September, 1908. The plaintiff, S. B. Quinn, is a beneficiary under the will. The affidavits of William Ernest Manning, solicitor, and of D. Flannery and S. B. Quinn stated that repeated applications had been made to the defendant to render an account of his dealings with the assets of the estate, which it was alleged he had administered since September, 1909. The plaintiff, D. Flannery, deposed that prior to a visit to England he had authorised his co-executor, M. Burke, to operate on the trust funds of the estate. Deponent stated that he wished to retire from the trust, but could not do so, as some of the beneficiaries were not of age. Deponent on his return from England had signed transfer of lands at Harris Park (part of the estate) to enable the sale to be completed. Counsel for the plaintiffs stated that the defendant had been repeatedly asked to furnish accounts in the estate, but had failed to do so.

His Honor made an order that the Master in Equity take account of the estate that had come into the hands of the defendant or the plaintiff, David Flannery; also of testator's debts, and of what part of the estate was not disposed of. It was also directed that, if necessary, the estate be administered by the Court. His Honor reserved the question of costs.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

CONSTRUCTION OF A WILL.

Tietyens v Cox.

In giving his reserved judgment, his Honor said that the suit was brought to determine whether John Oliver Cox was entitled to receive the purchase money of certain lands from the trustees. In other words, whether the execution of a disentailing deed barred the issue in tail and the estates expectant on the determination of the estates tail. The whole course of judicial interpretation of the Real Property Act had recognised that the common law principle of dealing with equitable estates was still applicable to equitable interests in land under the Act. The new practice as to foreclosure, especially as provided for registered interests under the Act, had left the old practice as to foreclosure undisturbed, so far as equitable interests were concerned. For these reasons his Honor held that J. O. Cox was entitled to the moneys in the hands of the trustees.

Mr. Power appeared for the plaintiffs, Frederick William Tietyens and William Cummins; Mr. Flannery and Mr. Coffee for the defendants, Frederick Keith Cox, Anna Montague and Elsa Mary Cox; and Mr. W. A. Parker for the defendant, John Oliver Cox. The instructing solicitors for all the parties were Messrs. Emerson and Tietyens, of Albury, by their Sydney agents, Messrs. C. A. Coghlan and Co.

DISPUTED RIGHT-OF-WAY.

Scholes v Blunt.

This was a claim by the plaintiff, Joseph Batterby Scholes, that the defendant, Daniel Blunt, should be restrained from trespassing on certain land at Muswellbrook, in which a right-of-way was in dispute. The defendant counter-claimed that the plaintiff be restrained from interfering with defendant's rights on the said land. In giving judgment, his Honor said that the contract with Judge Scholes expressly excepted any easements, and his Honor saw no reason why he should restrict the meaning of that expression to easements created by grant or reservation. Blunt, at that date, had an easement in equity under a fully-executed agreement for an easement, and was in actual enjoyment of it. He was also in occupation of a piece of the land sold under that agreement. The simple test was, could Judge Scholes, under that agreement, have objected to the agreement made between Blunt and Robey as a blot on the title? His Honor was of opinion that, in the terms of the agreement, Robey could have insisted on Judge Scholes recognising Blunt's easement. Under those circumstances no benefit accrued to the plaintiff from the registering of his documents as against Blunt's unregistered agreement. The suit was dismissed, with costs, and the chief prayer in the counter-claim was granted, with costs.

Mr. Clive Teece, instructed by Messrs. H. C. Ellison Rich and Sons, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. R. K. Manning and Mr. W. A. Parker, instructed by Messrs. H. V. Harris and Wheeler, of Newcastle, by their Sydney agent, Mr. Reginald Harris, for the defendant.

TIMBER WORKERS' UNION.

Milburn v Quill.

This was a dispute among the members of the New South Wales branch of the Australian Timber Workers' Union concerning the election of a new committee. The plaintiffs were Charles Milburn and Nicholas Smith, and the defendants Arthur S. Quill and other members of the old committee. The latter had resigned, and a new committee was elected—illegally, according to the old committee. The dispute came before the Court, and his Honor ordered a fresh election, and appointed Mr. Henry Hoyle presiding officer, and also two scrutineers. The election took place, and it was reported to the Court that the new committee had been re-elected by a 3 to 1 majority. His Honor made an order dismissing the suit, and discharging the receiver. The costs are to be paid by the union. Mr. Jordan, instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co., appeared for the petitioner. Mr. J. A. Browne, instructed by Messrs. Moffatt and Penny, for the old committee; and Mr. S. A. Thompson, instructed by Messrs. Sullivan Brothers, for the new committee.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Gordon.)

KERR v KERR.

Irene May Kerr, formerly Brown, applied for a divorce from Herbert Hallam Kerr, the grounds alleged being habitual drunkenness and cruelty. The marriage took place at Sydney in August, 1911, according to the rites of the Methodist Church. A decree nisi, returnable in six months, was granted. Petitioner was represented by Mr. Windeyer (Messrs. Windeyer and Williams).

AUSTIN v AUSTIN.

Emily Frances Austin, formerly Alcock, sought a dissolution of her marriage with William Henry Austin, on the ground of desertion. The parties were married at Sydney in September, 1902, according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Perry (instructed by Mr. J. W. Abigail) appeared for the petitioner, who was granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

SUNDSTROM v SUNDSTROM.

Florence Sundstrom, formerly Olsen, asked for a decree against Carl Gustaf Sundstrom, for restitution of conjugal rights. The marriage was celebrated at Redfern in July, 1912, according to the rites of the Methodist Church of Australasia. His Honor ordered respondent to return to the petitioner within 21 days of the service of the order. Mr. R. W. Fraser represented the petitioner.

DAVIDSON v DAVIDSON.

Nellie Davidson (formerly Watson) applied for a divorce from George Dunn Davidson, alleging desertion. The parties were married at Redfern in January, 1908, according to the Presbyterian rites. A decree nisi was granted, returnable in six months. Mr. R. W. Fraser appeared for the petitioner.

SHARMAN v SHARMAN.

Dorothy Peare Sharman (formerly Kain) sought for a decree against Edward Richard Sharman for restitution of conjugal rights. The parties were married in August, 1913, at Sydney, according to the rites of the Anglican Church. His Honor granted a decree, directing the respondent to return to the petitioner within 21 days of the order. Mr. R. W. Fraser represented the petitioner.

GALE v GALE.

Clara Rebecca Gale (formerly Simmons) sought a dissolution of her marriage with William Gale on the grounds of habitual drunkenness and non-support, and habitual drunkenness and cruelty. The marriage was celebrated at Sydney, in February, 1904, according the rites of the New Unitarian Church. A decree was granted, returnable in six months. Mr. R. W. Fraser appeared for the petitioner.

COMMONWEALTH ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Duffy.)

MUSICIANS' CLAIMS.

The hearing was resumed at the Royal Society's rooms, Elizabeth-street, of claims made by the Musicians' Union of Australia against J. C. Williamson and others for higher wages and improved conditions. Mr. Alfred O'Brien, general secretary, with Mr. A. J. Davidson, secretary of the Victorian district, appeared for the union; and Mr. T. Darbyshire appeared for J. C. Williamson and others. Numerous interested concerns were also represented.

His Honor, before proceeding with the business of the Court, said:—At the last sitting of this Court I was under the impression that Mr. O'Brien had intimated that if certain wages which were being enjoyed by his clients were reduced they would strike. I called Mr. O'Brien's attention to that fact, and in the first place he did not agree that he had used any words that would justify that assumption, and in the alternative he disclaimed any intention to suggest that there would be a strike, even if his words might reasonably have that import. I adjourned the matter for two reasons—first, that I might look at the transcript and see if it bore out my view of what had been said, and, in the second place, if it did bear out my view, to consider what course I ought to take. I have looked at the transcript, and in my opinion it fully justified my belief that Mr. O'Brien did intimate to me that his clients would probably strike if certain wages were reduced. Now, it is intolerable that men come to arbitration, whether employers or employees, with the idea that if the award was unsatisfactory to them they would take the means of strike, and it is still more unsatisfactory that any Court sitting to arbitrate should be informed that it is the intention of a party to do so. It is nothing more nor less than an intimation that the party intends to break the law, and, speaking for myself, I never propose to be a party to making an award where there is an indication, however veiled, that if the award is not satisfactory the persons who are disappointed will strike. There remains this: Mr. O'Brien undoubtedly, when his attention was called to what was said, disclaimed any intention of affronting the Court, and said that in his heat he might have been betrayed into words which overstated his intention, and in any case he was not speaking officially for the men, intimating that he had not any authority from them to make such an announcement. That being so, and as we have got this far on our inquiry, on the understanding that Mr. O'Brien absolutely and unequivocally withdraws any suggestion that he desires to intimate that the consequence of any award might be a strike, I shall proceed in this case. I desire, as there has been a misapprehension in this case, to be thoroughly well understood that I go on only on the express, absolute, and unequivocal statement and admission by Mr. O'Brien that he did not intend, and does not now intend, to make any suggestion such as might have been gathered from his words.

Mr. O'Brien said he would have mentioned the matter previously, but he thought that what he said at the last hearing gave his Honor the assurance that he asked for. Without any reservation or equivocation he, and the union, stated that there would not be any strike, and they had always been of that opinion. He was opposed on the other side by a number of gentlemen, and perhaps the rather acrimonious turn of the evidence or the speeches during the evidence, might have led him a little further than he intended. There had been no meeting of the union, but the leaders whom he had met had been very distressed that he should have given utterance to anything which they entirely repudiated.

His Honor: Very well, we will forget the matter and proceed.

After hearing further evidence and argument his Honor proposed that there should be another conference of the parties. He indicated that for all work except grand opera, which would have to be higher, the minimum should be 10s per performance of 2½ hours, assuring the musicians £3 per week, and the parties should endeavour to come to an agreement as to the rate to be paid for time worked over this.

The parties agreed to confer, and the Court was adjourned until 2 p.m. on Monday.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Acting Justice Scholes.)

CROSS APPEALS.

In the cross appeals by the New South Wales Sawmill and Timber Yard Employees' Association and the Chief Commissioner for Railways and Tramways, Mr. M. Henwood appeared for the association, and Mr. F. W. Bretnall for the Chief Commissioner. After hearing argument, his Honor delivered judgment, varying the award in certain respects. The alterations were principally of a technical nature. The question of wages was referred to a board, with the direction for them to find whether the principles laid down in the Government Tramways Group No. 3 Board's award were applicable to this industry. If they were found to be applicable the board was ordered to apply them.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Backhouse.)

ALLEGED NEGLIGENCE.

Joseph Mayoh, of O'Connell-street, Sydney, contractor, sued A. A. Hundt, of Malvern-avenue, Croydon, for negligently driving his motor vehicle against plaintiff's motor car, which was damaged by the collision. He claimed £30 compensation. The defendant denied negligence. A verdict was returned for the plaintiff for £5.

Mr. R. Windeyer, instructed by Messrs. M'Laughlan and Murray, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. H. E. Manning, instructed by Messrs. M'Elhone and Barnes, for the defendant.

(Before Judge Docker.)

ALLEGED SLANDER.

Piaud v Eaton.

Auguste Adolphe Piaud sued George Eaton for £30 damages for words alleged to have been maliciously spoken by the defendant of the plaintiff to the effect that the latter was a German. Mr. Coyle, instructed by Messrs. Beehag and Simpson, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. J. M. Sanders, instructed by Mr. P. M. Sanders, for the defendant. Mr. Sanders took objection to the plaintiff's claim, that Regulation 122, issued under the War Precautions Act, required the plaintiff, before commencing an action of this nature, to first obtain the consent of the Federal Attorney-General. Such consent not having been obtained, the action must be struck out.

His Honor, after hearing Mr. Coyle, held the defence fatal, and ordered that the case be struck out, and awarded costs to the defendant.

TAXICABS' COLLISION.

Briggs v Kendall the Elder.

William Briggs, of Stanley-street, Waverley, taxicab driver, proceeded against William Kendall the elder, of Hampton-street, Balmain, taxicab proprietor. The plaintiff claimed that defendant's servant so negligently drove a motor car that it ran into plaintiff's car, breaking and damaging it. He claimed £100. The defence was a denial of the alleged negligence. The case was settled by consent, the defendant to pay the plaintiff £30 damages and £12 costs. The plaintiff is to obtain a statement from the owner of his car that he will not sue defendant for any damages. Judgment would not be enforced till this undertaking was given. His Honor gave leave to mention the matter to any Judge. Mr. Maxwell, instructed by Mr. Schrader, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Milner Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Baxter Bruce, and Ebsworth, for the defendant.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Ferguson and juries.)

Mr. C. A. White, Crown Prosecutor.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE.

JURY DISMISSED.

Oppo Kong Sing, 43, a Chinese, was charged with feloniously slaying Young Buck Hoy, another Chinese, at Sydney, on October 13. Mr. Mack, instructed by Mr. E. Maddocks Cohen, appeared for Sing, who pleaded not guilty.

The case for the Crown was that Hoy went to a produce store in Hay-street, where accused worked, and complained about the short delivery of chaff. He said he ordered three bags, but only two were forwarded to him. The accused insisted that three bags had been delivered. An argument ensued, and the accused was alleged to have struck Hoy, who fell heavily on to the concrete floor, hitting his head. His skull was fractured, and he died a few minutes later. When Constable Hamilton arrived on the scene accused told him that Hoy had called him a thief and a liar, and he struck him.

At the close of the Crown case Mr. Mack contended that if the accused was convicted the Judge, having regard to the facts, might not impose more than a nominal penalty, and he asked his Honor to exercise the powers vested in him by section 24 of the Crimes Act, which provided that in such a contingency his Honor could dismiss the jury without a verdict.

His Honor agreed to that course being adopted, and discharged Sing.

Mr. J. J. Carroll watched proceedings on behalf of the relatives of the deceased; Mr. E. R. Abigail, on behalf of Joe Foong Chong, deceased's employer; and Mr. Leslie Gannon, on behalf of Tiy, Chong, and Co., on whose premises the fatality occurred.

ADELONG TRAGEDY.

MACK RELEASED.

His Honor delivered his reserved judgment in the case of James Mack, who had been charged with feloniously and maliciously murdering his brother by shooting him, at Adelong. On Wednesday last the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter, with a very strong recommendation to mercy, as they were of the opinion that Mack believed that he was in danger of his life when he fired the gun. Mr. J. W. Abigail, who defended Mack, submitted that the jury's recommendation was tantamount to a verdict of not guilty, because clearly it was a verdict of homicide in self-defence. His Honor postponed his decision until yesterday, when he said that he had decided to discharge the prisoner. Mack was accordingly released from custody.

FALL FROM A TRAM.

Sydney John Hughes, 24, pleaded not guilty to feloniously slaying Henry Douglas, at Sandringham, on October 22. Mr. Leslie Gannon appeared for the defence.

According to the evidence for the Crown accused, deceased, and other young men had been spending the day at Sandringham, where they had several disputes. Accused got on a tram bound for Kogarah, and after it had gone a few yards Douglas also got on it. Shortly afterwards the latter fell between the engine and the first car, and was killed.

The Crown alleged that accused struck Douglas and knocked him off the car.

Giving evidence on his own behalf, Hughes said that when Douglas boarded the tram he said to witness: "I want a piece of you," and struck at him. In doing so he lost his balance and fell. Witness denied that he had touched Douglas.

After the lunch adjournment the foreman of the jury said they did not wish to hear any more evidence, and returned a verdict of not guilty. Hughes was accordingly discharged.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Hamilton and jury.

Mr. R. J. Browning, Crown Prosecutor.

ACQUITTED.

Vera Lloyd, 41, was acquitted on a charge of having, at Sydney on October 4, maliciously injured a plateglass window, the property of William Leslie Lyman, doing damage to the extent of £7/7/. Mr. E. J. Spear defended Lloyd, who was discharged.

SENTENCES.

The following prisoners, who had pleaded guilty or had been convicted, were called up for sentence:—

Rowland Herbert Smyrk, 28, five charges of stealing from dwellings at Neutral Bay, Mosman, Gordon, and Lindfield, and three charges of larceny at Turramurra, Neutral Bay, and Lindfield—18 months' imprisonment, with hard labour, in Goulburn Gaol on each charge, the terms to be concurrent.

Bernard Rosky, 28, and Joseph Seale, 27, having, in company, assaulted Thomas Collison, and robbed him of a watch and portion of a chain—Rosky, five years' penal servitude; Seale, three years' hard labour in Parramatta Gaol.

Charles Roxburge, 33, and Sydney Hamilton, 29, conspiring together to obtain typewriters from several city firms, with intent to cheat and defraud—Roxburge, two and a half years' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol; Hamilton, 18 months' imprisonment in the same institution. Roxburge also pleaded guilty to stealing a typewriter, the property of Hector Lamond, and a telephone set, at Sydney, on October 23, and was sentenced to two and a half years' hard labour, concurrent with the other sentence.

James Wesley Burless, 22, stealing £13 and a watch and chain—nine months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol.

Arthur William Smith, 23, and Rupert Coughlan, 22, assaulting Nicholas Galamis, with intent to rob him—12 months' hard labour each in Goulburn Gaol.

TREATED AS FIRST OFFENDER.

Frank Sydney Bowerman, 54, pleaded guilty to misappropriating the sum of £16/16/11, the property of the King, at Rockdale on October 26, and was sentenced to 18 months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol. The sentence, however, would be suspended and Bowerman released as a first offender on entering into recognisances to be of good behaviour for 12 months, and on making full restitution of the amount defrauded.

CATHOLIC FEDERATION AND I.W.W.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I regret having to trouble you, but owing to the fact that I live in Woollahra, and spoke against conscription, several persons have identified me with the writer of a letter, attributed to Mr. A. T. Cleary, and published in the "Herald" during the week, in which the Woollahra Anti-Conscription League condemned the conviction and the sentences on the I.W.W. men. The writer, Miss A. T. Cleary, is not related to me. Long before the I.W.W. became notorious in this country I wrote to the press condemning their methods. In my opinion the organisation should have been prohibited long ago. I think the country should be congratulated on the result of recent action, and I hope that the Government will spare no effort to eradicate completely the pernicious movement.

I am, etc.,
P. S. CLEARY,
President Catholic Federation of N.S.W.

BOARD OF MISSIONS.

A women's missionary meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Friday afternoon to discuss the appointment of a woman missionary under the auspices of the women's auxiliary. Mrs. Pattinson, who presided, said that money was needed for salary and travelling expenses for the official whom it was proposed to appoint. The sum of £200 would be needed for a start.

The Bishop elect of Armidale (the Rev. W. F. Wentworth-Sheilds) said that both men and women workers were needed in church, especially in mission enterprises. Mrs. J. Jones detailed the work of the women's auxiliary at the home base. Miss E. King discussed the form which the duties of the organising secretary would most probably take.

SENTINEL STEAM TRAPS, AND THEIR USE.

Many large power-users, while recognising the necessity of keeping their steam pipes free of water, are still ignorant of the value of an efficient Steam Trap. Though they have taken great care to provide drain connections, separators, etc., these methods cannot be classed as satisfactory. The money saved by a good Steam Trap is considerable.

As an example, in a large power station, eight Sentinel Traps discharged on an average over five tons of water in 24 hours. Think this over.

A difficulty with most Steam Traps is to keep the valve tight, but with the

"SENTINEL" STEAM TRAP

this difficulty is entirely eliminated, owing to the valve regrinding itself.
Suitable for pressures up to 250lb.
There are numerous other features described in our "Sentinel" Steam Trap Catalogue. Send for a copy.

GLEN INNES TO GRAFTON.

(By C.E.L.)

The distance between Glen Innes and Grafton is 110 miles, and the journey, now made by car, takes just eight hours. About four years ago the trip, prior to the coming of the car, occupied forty-eight hours, and the road in those years exacted a fairly large toll of human and animal life along its dangerous length. All the way down the Big Hill—seven miles long—the car driver of to-day points out spots that were the scenes of accidents to man and beast. That this steep gradient still has its terrors was evidenced by the weather-beaten remains of three motor cars which we saw away down in the gully, hundreds of feet below. But, with good brakes, and careful driving, the risk is gradually nearing the irreducible minimum, and the trip is a beautiful one, and educational as well.

The surprises at each turn of the road are varied. We come around a hair-pin bend and down for miles can be seen our road, looking like a yellow ribbon threaded in and out of piles of billiard cloth. Half-way down we come to the corner known as the Look-out, with its wonderful perspective and panoramic views. On every side, in the middle and far distance, can be seen the mountains of the coastal ranges. The chameleon-like changes, through successive shades of green to the blue and purple of the far mountain peaks, delight the eye, whilst the scars on the hillsides bring to the mind one of Scott's pictures:

And oft the path and hill were torn
Where wintry torrents down had borne
And heaped upon the cumber'd land
Its wreck of gravel, rocks, and sand.

Through all this feast of Nature's colourings runs the yellow ribbon, man's puny handiwork, by which he pierces Nature's strongholds and subjugates the primeval. And we were all the time going down, two thousand feet down, to the point where the road was linked by a fine four-span wooden bridge over the Mann River. After this bridge there was a three-mile climb to the top of Stirrup-iron Hill, and then it was all down grade to sea level. The natural vegetation of the trip is prolific and varied.

There are ranges of those useful forest chieftains, the white and grey ironbark and blackbutt. Below, in the creeks, can be seen silky oak, while cedar, rosewood, and other valuable timbers which at one time were so much firewood, but which are now, thanks to scientific classification, taking their rightful places in the assets of the State, are also to be seen. Amongst all is the ever-present wild-apple. Like the kurrajong, the wild-apple is a fodder tree, but, unlike the kurrajong, it is ragged-branched and unsymmetrical.

Dalmorton is one of the many towns of Australia whose rise and fall are traceable to the discovery and loss of gold. Not so long ago Dalmorton was a busy mining town, with 3000 inhabitants, five hotels, three stores, and its own annual races. Now it lies, a few scattered dwellings, occupied for the most part by tenacious fossickers, who will not give up the search for the elusive streak. But there are metals yet in these hills. Barney's Hill, the sentinel of the range, with his needle-pointed apex surrounded by a perennial watery halo, has, deep in his bowels, undiscovered wealth. Already there are on his flanks two mines—one of gold, with its ten-head battery, and another of molybdenite—both paying propositions. After crossing the Stirrup-iron we ran along the Little River for over 30 miles, through magnificent cattle country on Broadmeadows and Buccarumbi stations, both famous for their Durhams. This was the most restful part of the trip. The road is level and well-made, and runs along the river on the hither side of which are thousands of peach trees. It is said that the road-makers threw peach stones into the gully when the road was being made, and these trees are the result.

The last stage of the trip is over the Baroden Bridge, a fine steel structure, spanning the Nymboida River, thence through a tunnel hewn through solid rock for about 30 yards, and the only one, so it is claimed by the residents, on a main coach road in the State. From this point on to South Grafton we passed through dairying country, and saw many magnificent cows, amongst equally fine lucerne, for which, as well as for potatoes, this section of our northern rivers country is famous. After all our hundred odd miles of mountains, gorges, and evidences of Nature's frenzy in a prehistoric age, the sight of the beautiful Clarence at South Grafton reminded us that here, in this broad sheet of water, was provision made for the transport of the yield of those mountain storehouses by cheap water carriage.

THE WOOL TRADE.

GROWERS STILL IN THE DARK.

There has been much inquiry and considerable speculation during the week with regard to the main essentials of the requisitioning of the balance of the current season's Commonwealth clip by the Federal Government, on behalf the Imperial authorities, but no definite information has been given by the Prime Minister, or any other authority, on so pressing a question to the woolgrowers of the States, who have not yet disposed of their wool. Less disappointment perhaps would have been felt if Mr. Hughes had not said that he would make statements at certain times on the subject, and then failed to do so. Doubtless, the best has been done by him in the circumstances. Parliament has been sitting and other weighty matters have demanded his attention. A Minister with fewer burdens; or a Commissioner, with wide trade knowledge, might perhaps have been entrusted with carrying out the details incidental to the deal. In that case, the same sound business methods that have been pursued in the acquisition of the New Zealand clip might have been carried out here. For instance, the Dominion Government, realising that it was called upon to act on behalf of the Imperial Government in the purchase of the clip, straightaway consulted, in the first place, only the parties whose wool was to be sold. A conference of woolgrowers only was called upon to decide the question of price. They were not kept in the dark, nor was there a lot of unnecessary secrecy observed that concerned them, and then only at the price-stage of the negotiations with the Imperial authorities. After the question of price was settled; then it became a matter for the Government to decide as to the best means for receiving, valuing, storing, and shipping the wool. Meetings were called of growers, brokers, buyers, and freezing companies, who discussed matters separately; and made their various proposals for dealing with the wool as required. By this means the woolgrowers knew precisely where they stood from the start; whereas the Commonwealth growers, outside the few men that were invited to consult with brokers, scourers, buyers, and manufacturers, are still wondering what price this mixed body is offering their wool at.

In a national matter of this kind, where the wool is being requisitioned in Imperial interests, as part of the successful prosecution of the war by Great Britain and our Allies, there is no reason for supposing that the woolgrowers of the Commonwealth would be less patriotic than the growers in New Zealand. They, in all probability, would have agreed to sell at values on a par with the rates to be paid to their confreres in the dominion. There may have been no difference in the price that they would have resolved upon than that which the central committee advised the Prime Minister to submit to the War Office. The result may have come out precisely the same; but there would have been this essential difference: the grower and owner would have been the party to the contract, would have known what was proposed, and would not have to go round and wonder what a mixed committee, including scourers, buyers, and manufacturers, with selling brokers, were doing on his behalf. He, the owner, would have his price fixed; and as there would be no competitive woolgrower coming along, cutting under with a tender, for all the wool is under offer, it could be disclosed without detriment to anybody. That surely would have been better, and preferable to the price being bandied about in a semi-confidential and mysterious way.

After the owners had decided price, and recommended same to the Commonwealth Government, then they would be further concerned as a body in the way that the wool would be handled—whether they would continue each consigning to their own selling broker, paying commission and all other charges, having the firm acting for them, or whether the selling broker would be acting for the Government. Herein came the necessity for the woolbroking firms acting in their capacity quite apart from scourers, buyers, and manufacturers. The Government would need the wool consignments to be received, stored, displayed, dumped, and shipped as economically and expeditiously as in the ordinary way of trade. These facilities the selling brokers possess to as near perfection as possible, and the question arises, will the provision of these, without effecting any sale of each consignment separately, by auction or private treaty, entitle the brokers to commission from the grower, as under the old order, or will all expenses, or part of them, be charged to the Government. The brokers may possibly act in a dual capacity, partly as growers' representatives and partly as Government agents. This aspect of the tremendous change wholly concerns growers and the Government, with the selling brokers, not buyers, scourers, and manufacturers. The only place that buyers can have in the scheme appears to be that of sworn valuers, in short, employees of the Government. Unless, indeed, there can be any dealing still carried on in a small way that will contribute to collecting oddments that would otherwise go to waste under any Government scheme, possibly the cost would be greater than the wool so saved.

The possibility has to be kept in view that some of the great changes now made may be more or less permanent. Governments may treat with Governments after the war; reserving the rights to sell to growers or other potential enemies such necessaries for military purposes as wool or metals. In any case, the precedents that are now being established in the requisitioning of the clip should be sound, and not need apology for at some future date.

With regard to the scourers in the present scheme, they are naturally concerned in receiving wools to treat on the same scale as formerly; more, if possible. Some may patriotically wish to be on the executive committees to see the acquisition through as economically as possible, regardless of trade consequences. But as business men they are concerned in keeping their works going. If growers who formerly had wools scoured on commission now prefer to sell in the grease, and thus reduce the proportion of wool treated here, then possibly some means will be taken to induce the Imperial authorities to have a good proportion scoured here; saving freight, as well as labour in England that is required for other war purposes. As to the manufacturers, they are interested in obtaining their proportion of the clip for domestic purposes; and their claim is almost sure to be met in the acquisition scheme. It is estimated that wool users in the Commonwealth absorbed during the 1915-16 season about 150,000 bales of wool. Much of this, of course, would be required for military purposes.

VALUING AND BROKING CHARGES.

In the New Zealand acquisition scheme it was reported that the Minister at that time had still to meet the buyers to arrange with them about the terms on which they shall undertake the duty of valuing the wool. A proposal was adopted by the conference to give any grower who considers his wool has been undervalued a right of appeal. Local committees were to be set up, representing farmers' unions, A. and R. associations, and such bodies of farmers, and these committees to elect any executive committee to deal with any such complaints. These local committees to be established at the ports gazetted as ports of delivery, and the idea is that through the local executive a farmer may arrange for an independent valuation of his wool. For this independent valuation the farmer will have to pay. There is no proposal that this latter valuation must inevitably be accepted by the Government as the basis of payment. What the procedure will be in such cases is still indefinite, and nothing can be done finally until the points of delivery are determined, and the local committees have been appointed.

The brokers' charges were still to be settled, but the settlement of them has been left to a committee of three representatives of the brokers and the Advisory Board to the Ministry of Munitions. The brokers offered a flat rate of ¼d per lb., and as an alternative they set out the rates they would be prepared to accept for the different services to be rendered by them. One of the unknown quantities to be estimated in these services is that of storage. The wool may have to stay a long or a short period, and probably in the event of the flat rate offer being the one accepted, some limit will be asked for by the brokers on the period of storage to be covered by that rate.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Wool has been coming into store during the week in good volume, over 16,000 bales being received by rail; the receipts by boat, however, have shown a material decrease, compared to the corresponding week last year. The quantity for the week and for the season to date compares with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

Net seaboard decrease for season to date, 66,095 bales.

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Two vessels have cleared the Sydney Customs since review with wool for the United Kingdom and Japan, totalling 8131 bales, as compared with eight vessels during the corresponding week last year, aggregating 54,522 bales. The quantity for the week and season compares with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

PARRAMATTA ORCHARD NOTES.

The warm weather of the past week has brought the summer fruit on wonderfully, but the growers have been handicapped by the restrictions necessarily imposed in consequence of the coal strike. During the period of uncertainty the jam factories had to cease operations, consequently the very early fruit, such as cherry plum, and apricots, had to be sacrificed. Practically there were only the Sydney markets open to the growers, and soa glut came in early. The markets were overstocked, consequently low prices reigned, and in many instances growers were informed that their consignments had been sent to the tip. But still they had to pay the expenses of picking and packing, freight, cartage and agents' fees. The chief cause of the glut, remarked one grower, was the fact that the usual consignments of early fruit could not be despatched to Tasmania, New Zealand, and Victoria. Thousands of boxes go to these places ordinarily at this time of the year. Asked what were the prospects for the remainder of the season, the grower said, "I consider the prospects are decidedly good, but we shall see. The jam people seem to think that they will have the best of the deal. I as a grower am of opinion that the growers are on a good wicket, and that good prices will rule from this on. Why? Well, there is not so much fruit as some people imagine—that is, in our State; and in Victoria the conditions are infinitely less favourable. There the summer fruit crop is a failure. The jam factories have immense orders and must have the fruit, so they will not be able to hang back and buy at tip prices. No, not this year. There may be an occasional glut. For instance, there may be a glut early next week, for we all have fruit that should have been marketed a week back. It was worse than useless, however, to pick it, but on Monday the coal restrictions will be lifted as far as the jam factories are concerned, and it is quite certain that the fruit will be rushed into the markets early in the week. It must be so, for the fruit is waiting, and can't wait any longer. After the first rush, however, when things come to the normal again, there will not only be a good market in the city, but growers will be able to send a fair amount of stuff to the southern capital. As a matter of fact, the Victorian jam factories will have to purchase a good deal of the New South Wales fruit, in order that they may fulfil their contract orders. So, when all these matters are taken into consideration, it does not appear as though fruit will be given away this season."

FARM DWELLING DESIGNS.

COMPETITION FOR SILVER CUP.

The Royal Agricultural Society of New South Wales is inviting competitive designs for dwellings suitable for returned soldiers, small farmers, farm workers, share farmers, and others settling on the land. The prize offered for the design placed first is a silver cup, presented by his Excellency the Governor-General, Sir Ronald Munro-Ferguson, and designs must be submitted to the secretary of the Royal Agricultural Society not later than January 20 next. All designs submitted will be exhibited at the Royal Show, and non-premiated designs will be available for collection on its termination. The assessors, whose decision in all matters relating to the competition shall be final, will be: The president and secretary of the Royal Agricultural Society, the president of the Institute of Architects of N.S.W., and two ladies and a fellow of the Institute of Architects of N.S.W. nominated by the above assessors. Copies of conditions may be obtained from the secretary of the R.A.S. or the Institute of Architects, Elizabeth-street, Sydney.

ALLOTMENT OF PENS.

EGG-LAYING COMPETITION, 1917.

At a meeting held at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College, the committee controlling the H.A.C. egg-laying competitions, dealt with the applications for pens in connection with the forthcoming competition, which commences on April 1, 1917. It was decided to carry over ten groups of birds from section A to section D (second year), and ten groups from section B to section E (second year). Should a bird die in any of the selected groups before the end of the first 12 months, the remaining birds will not be carried over, but another group will be selected. The owner of the group, which has been rejected, will be given the opportunity of filling an emergency pen in sections A or B (1917-18 competition), should such occur. Forty groups were allotted in section A, and 30 groups in section B, and should the owner of any of the groups be called upon to fill a vacancy in the second year competition, as referred to above, admission to either of the sections will be cancelled, and the entry fee refunded.

SYDNEY HOSPITAL.

At the last meeting of the board of directors of the Sydney Hospital a letter was received from the Minister of Public Health, notifying that the special grant for maintenance purposes had been reduced on the Estimates from £15,000 to £11,818. A deputation from the hospital had, on the previous day, waited on the Minister, when the financial position of the hospital was explained, and the impossibility of cutting down the financial assistance received from the Government without seriously affecting the efficiency of the hospital in its work amongst the sick poor was emphasised.

The Minister said that he was not in favour of curtailing the activities of the hospital in any way, and was satisfied that the hospital authorities and management were doing their part, and that it remained for the Government to supplement their efforts, and save the hospital from getting into financial difficulty, and possibly being compelled to lessen its activities—a course which would be most undesirable.

FLORAL ALMANAC.

We have received a copy of the Australian Floral Handbook, by A. E. Cole. The booklet deals with the laying out of the garden, preparation of soil, boundary and path making, seeds, seedlings, and cuttings, arrangement of plants, and gives much information of value to those who make and keep their own gardens. It is written in simple language, giving plain, concise directions, with interesting facts.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

There was a fair amount of business transacted in the Real Estate Market this week. In fact, considering the adverse conditions under which Sydney, in common with other parts of the world, is passing, those who control real estate express themselves as satisfied with the year's transactions so far. As usual, this week's indoor sales were well attended. For a number of the properties offered competition was keen, and although the reserves were not always reached, yet a number of sales was recorded. Private inquiries have also been good, while the subdivision auctions last Saturday were particularly successful, so that, considering all things, the Real Estate Market, notwithstanding that the volume of business is below normal, is sound and full of hope.

There was a sale of big city property this week, but particulars are withheld for the present.

Messrs. Raine and Horne on Thursday held their usual fortnightly indoor auction, which was largely attended. Mr. Rabett submitted a dozen city and suburban properties. There was fair competition for two warehouses in Wentworth-avenue, at the corner of Goulburn-street. One was passed in at £13,500, and the other was passed in at £8000. There was a bid of £900 for six cottages at Alexandria. Lilianfels, in Carlotta-road, on the Double Bay side of Bellevue Hill, was passed in at £1625. A residential site at Rose Bay was sold at 40/ per foot, and three building blocks in the same suburb were disposed of at 35/ per foot. The cottage, Eulo, at Stanmore, was sold for £545. During the week this firm sold by private contract a residence off the Manning-road, Double Bay, for £1700, and allotment fronting Belmore-road, Randwick, with 53ft frontage, at £20 per foot, and 33ft, fronting Hill-street, Coogee, at £7 per foot.

At their weekly auction yesterday Messrs. Richardson and Wrench had a list of eight suburban properties to offer their constituents. Two of these properties were sold, one, a house in Morehead-street, Waterloo, brought £330, another, a cottage in Jeffreys-street, Canterbury, was sold for £410. There were offers for each of the other properties submitted. The sum of £3650 was refused for a water-frontage residence at Drummoyne. For three cottages at Marrickville an offer of £625 was declined. A cottage and land at Enfield were passed in at £285. £3 per foot was refused for an allotment at Canterbury, and a water-frontage cottage at Narrabeen was passed in at £275. During the week this firm sold a block on Midson-road, Eastwood, at 32/6 per foot, also an allotment, Margaret-street, Rhodes, for £200, which is at the rate of £2/10/ per foot, and four allotments in the Five Islands Estate at Port Kembla, at 15/ per foot.

Mr. C. H. Crammond this week included in his sales a villa residence, Cambridge and Merchant streets, Stanmore, for £1200, a cottage at Belmore for £460, and a cottage, Stanmore-road, Stanmore, for £750.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. this week sold a block of four cottages in Spring-street, Chatswood, for £1570.

There is still a good demand for cottage property at Stanmore, Enmore, and Leichhardt, as will be seen from the sales reported above. Added to these Mr. P. F. Goodin has sold two pairs of cottages in Francis-street, Enmore, for £1500; a house in Railway-avenue, Stanmore, for £650; also a pair of cottages in Kingston-road, Camperdown, for £765; and two allotments at Campsie for £140.

Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report that the past week has been quite up to the normal level. The firm disposed of a leasehold property at Pyrmont for £850; also cottages at Clyde, Ingleburn, and Bargo. The lastnamed suburb is a new subdivision, between Picton and Mittagong, which this firm will shortly open up for general sale. A number of farmlets was also sold at Bankstown, Toongabbie, and Ingleburn.

On the 14th inst., in the rooms of the association, Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. will offer a number of suburban properties.

Next Friday, the 15th inst., in their rooms, Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will submit to auction a subdivision block in area 50 acres, being the western moiety of Ryan's 100-acre grant on the heights of Bankstown. The land has over 500ft frontage to the north side of the Liverpool-road, with the great depth of nearly 5000ft. There is an old wooden cottage on the land. The prosperity of Bankstown during the last five years is sufficiently well known not to need special mention. This land is 12 minutes from the station.

The subdivision sales which took place last Saturday were not numerous, but they were successful. The sale at Rose Bay, conducted by Messrs. Raine and Horne, was particularly successful, both from the attendance point of view and from the keen competition which followed. Mr. Rabitt, in submitting this estate, known as the old Dover Heights Subdivision, had an audience of about 400. He disposed of 28 lots at prices up to £3 per foot, and got through the sale before the storm broke over the city. His total for the afternoon reached £3160. Since then the Government has taken another 12 allotments for a Public school site, for £900, and during the week five blocks were sold for another £600. That gives a total up to the present of £4700, which is good evidence of the popularity of the eastern suburbs for home sites. There have been numerous offers for the remaining blocks, but the reserves are being held to, and the balance of the subdivision is likely soon to be wiped off the plan.

Last Saturday Messrs. Richardson and Wrench held a sale at Ryde tram terminus, where Mr. Beattie submitted the Hampton Court estate to a fairly large audience. Competition was good, and 12 allotments were sold at prices ranging from 20/ to 40/ per foot. The total sales reached £1125.

Some fine land at Strathfield has at last been unlocked, and it will come under the hammer this afternoon, when Messrs. D. J. M'Intyre and Co. will conduct the sale. It is in the estate of the late Judge Josephson—a very fine property, about three-quarters of a mile from the railway station at the southern end of Redmyre-road, and opposite the Christian Brothers Training College, in Barker-road. The estate has been subdivided into 91 splendid residential sites, with liberal frontages, and good depths. The land has been lying idle for a long time, but now there is an opportunity given to secure, on liberal terms, good home sites. There is a building covenant of £600 and a uniform building line, 30 feet from the footpath.

This afternoon Mr. C. H. Crammond will conduct a subdivision sale at Sutherland, where he will offer the Riverside Extension Estate, comprising 63 spacious home sites, in a healthy and elevated locality. The Riverside Extension Estate, only five minutes from Sutherland station, occupies a position between the station and the Woronora River, and commands entrancing views of the beautiful reaches of that picturesque stream. Two new cottages, erected on the estate, will be included in the sale.

"AN EVENING IN SOCIETY."

A crowded house at St. James's Hall on Friday listened with much pleasure and profit to a drawing-room entertainment entitled "An Evening in Society," by the Rev. Thomas Tait, M.A. (Scots Church). The piquant criticisms and crisp hints that he gave on the art of conversation and on behaviour in the drawing-room were productive of great amusement. Mr. Tait described as selfish the man who shunned society and avoided the drawing-room, which existed for the sake of rest and intellectual recreation. Possession of the art of conversation, he said, was of the first importance in the drawing-room, but nowadays it was largely a lost art. So inundated were they with printer's ink that they read too much to be good talkers or as successful thinkers as they might otherwise become. He recommended reading aloud, also some memorising and recitation—with the proviso that at first it should not be before other people—for training in conversation. Silence was the cardinal sin of the drawing-room, and the other extreme was loquacity.

During the evening musical items were rendered by Miss Estelle Bowen and Mr. Miller.

THE GERMAN PLANS.

The German leaders have never left the world in any doubt of the manner in which their successes in Roumania would be made to serve the national purpose. The purely military results cannot yet be estimated. Although the Roumanians have suffered losses in battle, their main army is still intact, and it is possible that their northern army may escape and join the Russians. But the capture of Bucharest and of great masses of supplies will have more than justified the campaign even if the Roumanian army does not lose another man. It was intended to serve two purposes and to a great extent both have been fulfilled. The Germans hoped to counteract the depression caused by the increasing scarcity of food, by the allied advance, and by the Roumanian intervention. At the same time, by defeating an ill-equipped opponent they hoped to restore the legend of their invincibility in the eyes of the world, including their own vassal States. The capture of Bucharest was to nerve the German people to fresh exertion, and at the same time to make the allied countries more ready to listen to suggestions of peace. From the beginning of the war the enemy has watched for signs of war weariness in the allied countries, hoping that he would be able to use the popular feeling to break down Government resolution. For this reason great prominence was given both in the German newspapers and in the speeches of the Chancellor to Lord Loreburn's description in the House of Lords of the desolation of Europe. For a similar reason the result of the Australian referendum was hailed with delight, not because our monthly reinforcements would have been of great importance, but because the refusal could be interpreted as a sign that the spirit of the whole Empire was failing. In considering any of the Allies the Germans have always assumed that the people would respond to any call if persuaded that the end was near and would, therefore, be the more likely to refuse if they could be convinced that their enemies were as strong as ever. The value of the capture of Bucharest is that it will persuade the world that any threat made by Germany can be carried out. Paris, Calais, Ypres, and Verdun on the west; Venice on the south, and Petrograd on the north are witnesses of the many campaigns which have been launched or threatened with no result except the waste of valuable lives. But the reaction caused by this last victory will obliterate the memory of any number of failures and will be quoted as a proof that Germany can never be defeated. As our cablegrams have shown, the conquerors are making a characteristic use of their triumph. They have begun with Italy. Her aims were at first mainly local like those of Roumania. There was a small minority of the people, composed of Socialists and aristocrats, opposed to intervention. The defeat of the Roumanians has deeply touched the Italian nation, because the two peoples, besides being of the same blood, had similar interests in the Balkans and had long planned to free Roumanians under Hungary by converging attacks. Italy, therefore, is the object of the latest threats of vengeance. Her new base on the Adriatic is to be attacked, and when captured handed over to Greece, her rival in the Eastern Mediterranean. Coincidently or alternatively there is to be an attack on the Plain of Venice, the last Austrian possession added to United Italy. These threats have evidently been seized upon in the Italian Chamber of Deputies as a reason for attacking the national policy. The result of the voting shows that they have utterly failed. The Prime Minister informed the Chamber of the agreement as to the future of the Adriatic which he had concluded with the Allies. The Deputies were satisfied that such promises, though made at the expense of Austria, could be carried out; and they therefore postponed the Socialist resolution for six months, before which the threatened assaults will have been begun and ended.

It is obvious that the Germans will use their present position against any people which they think is suffering particularly from the prevailing reaction. At Verdun they are probably taking advantage of a fast-drying soil while the Allies are held up by the terrible weather on the Somme. But they are sure to make the utmost use of the political dissensions in France which may bring about a change of Government and the resignation of the Commander-in-Chief. It is by no means inconsistent with the use of these methods that the German Government is willing to exhibit the efforts of its own peace party to the world. It is eager to show the allied peoples not only that it will be in their interests to make peace but that their offers will be welcomed in the enemy countries. Nor is it to be supposed that the public meetings are engineered by the Government in order to lead the Allies into a trap. The Germans have suffered terribly, and will continue to suffer, though the blockade may be checked by the fall of Roumania. Their sufferings have been nothing to those of France, but the French have a motive for fighting on, and the Germans have not. The Germans have nothing more to gain. The French have to re-enter their occupied territory and to recover their lost territory. The British have to free the Atlantic coast of a menace which would be utterly fatal to its security. The Russians have to recover their lost provinces of Lithuania and Poland. They have jointly made engagements to smaller Powers, from which neither of them can withdraw without perpetual dishonour. For each of these Powers an immediate peace would be a surrender both of security and of self-respect. There can, therefore, be only one reply to German offers or German threats. But the Government which makes the reply is bound to do as the Italian Parliament did, and examine the foundation on which the threats are based. It is bound to point out to its people that the governing factors of the war are the same as they were when the allied Ministers were engaged in making optimistic speeches. It was then a condition of success that each nation should adapt all its energies to war purposes. It is so still. It was then demonstrable that if this condition was fulfilled and if the Allies held together they were certain of victory; and it is so still. The victories in Roumania cannot be dismissed, because they are a convincing proof of the strength of the German defences and of the existence of a strong mobile attacking force. But they do not alter the relative strength of the combatants in man-power and munitions; nor the fact that the overwhelming balance of strength is with the Allies, as it was with the Northern States of America after their year of disappointments in 1864.

THE GREAT TEST.

Having voted against the conscription proposals of the Federal Government, it now remains for the people of Australia to assist the new proposals of the Government for recruiting under the voluntary system. The need for a bold, unfaltering policy by Australia, in common with the rest of the Empire and its allies, as Mr. Hughes stated in the House of Representatives on November 29, is not less acute now than when the Government laid its proposals for compulsory enlistment before the country. The decision of the people has, of course, limited its scope of action, but the need for reinforcements for our soldiers at the front remains. We have placed five divisions of troops at the service of the Empire, and we are in honour bound to keep them up to strength. That can only be done by a determination to do under the voluntary system what we have refused to do under compulsion; and the new campaign upon which we are now entering must be regarded as a great test of the honour and virility of our race. In the natural order of things the people should look to the anti-conscriptionists to take the lead in this new campaign, or, at the least, to throw their whole energies into the movement. "The policy of the Government," says the Prime Minister, "is to fight by the side of Britain until Germany is beaten, and it calls upon all those who believe in that policy to support the Government." The conscription referendum is a thing of the past. It did not secure the support of a majority of the people, and it must now be forgotten, along with all the bitterness which it engendered. If we differ as to methods, we do not differ as to the necessity for a continuance of those efforts which we have made on behalf of a great and noble cause. The Director-General of Recruiting, Mr. D. Mackinnon, M.L.A., of Victoria, has begun well by ordering the removal from the Melbourne Town Hall of a recruiting poster which appeared to him to reflect on persons who had voted "No"; and it is in that spirit we must face the new conditions, working unitedly for the success of the campaign. The arrival of Mr. Mackinnon in Sydney to-day with a view to setting the recruiting machine in motion in this State is an event of the first importance to us, and it is incumbent upon us that we should get to work with the least possible delay. Briefly, the scheme aims at securing reinforcements on the basis of 16,500 a month, and the quota of New South Wales towards this is [illegible]. There seems no good reason why these figures should not be reached. Under the recent proclamation the enrolments in the Commonwealth totalled over 190,000, and about 60 per cent. were declared fit for military service. There is no doubt that, even after all necessary exemptions, we have the men available if they can only be prevailed upon to offer their services; for apart from the classes called up under the proclamation there are many thousands of other men of military age.

As we respond to the call that is now made upon us, so shall we be judged. Britain and the allied nations are watching us. Our own soldiers, desperately in need of the reinforcements which alone can give them the relief and rest they require, are watching us. Germany is watching us. It is the greatest test we have ever been called upon to face. It is a far cry back to the Soudan contingent which sailed from these shores in 1885, when for the first time in our history we sent a military expedition to fight for the motherland; but the remarks of the "Independance Belge" on that occasion that the offer had shown that Prince Bismarck's colonial adventure had only succeeded in drawing closer together the bonds between Great Britain and her children beyond the sea have a special application to-day, when Belgium lies bleeding under the heel of the barbarian. It was on that occasion, too, that Lord Derby wrote to the Governor of New South Wales:—"The desire and the power of the Australian colonies to offer effective military help in a campaign at a great distance from their shores mark a distinct and important advance in their political growth." It is a curious coincidence that another Lord Derby should have done so much to bring the great British army of to-day into being, and that in Australia at this moment we should be entering upon a recruiting scheme based very largely upon Lord Derby's plan. Every district, every town, is to be canvassed, and apart from the local committees there is to be a recruiting committee of seven members in each Federal electorate, with the Federal member for the electorate as chairman. Members of the Senate will be ex-officio members of any committee or group of committees which may suit their convenience, and all State members whose electorates are within the Federal electorates will be members of the committees. Thus there is a call to all members of Parliament, Federal and State, to co-operate in the new movement, regardless of how they stood in the referendum campaign. All differences will be sunk, and all will, we hope, work loyally together. These committees will, with the assistance of the smaller local committees, penetrate to all parts of the State, and over them all will be the State Recruiting Committee which will be in constant touch with the Director-General. In addition, paid organisers are to be employed. We have not had such a complete scheme as this before, and it will afford beyond all doubt a supreme test of the voluntary system. If it should fail, no member of Parliament and no other man will be able to say that voluntarism has not had a fair trial. If, therefore, those who held this view at the time of the referendum desire to prove their case, they will bend all their energies to the task of making this great campaign a success. They start out with the one clear fact before them that men are needed and they know that the men are available. Can they get the men to come forward? Will the personal appeals that are to be sent out to all eligible men succeed in bringing home to them the fact that the war which is being fought in Europe is their war just as much as if it were being waged in Australia, and that the liberties which they now enjoy can only be preserved by winning it? The answer to these questions will be our reply to the "Kolnische Zeitung" which in its delirious joy over the defeat of the referendum, accused Australians of rank cowardice, declaring that "all who were well out of gunshot voted for conscription, and all who would have been affected if it were passed voted against it." Are we going to take up the challenge, or are we, in very fact, going to allow ourselves to be branded as a race of cowards?

ORGANISING THE NATION

LLOYD GEORGE'S POLICY

SUPPORTED BY LABOUR

BUCHAREST

ROUMANIAN ARMY ESCAPES

GREECE

BLOCKADED BY ALLIES

Mr. Lloyd George is proceeding with the formation of a Cabinet. He states that his whole policy is to organise the nation for the successful prosecution of the war.

Mr. Lloyd George is to receive the support of the Labour party, which will be fully represented in the new Cabinet and War Council.

It is unofficially stated that the Roumanian forces escaped, practically intact from Bucharest, and that the Roumanian army is retiring to prepared positions, where the Russians are concentrating.

There are many accounts of outrages committed by the Royalists in Athens. The Allies, in retaliation, and to force reparation, have commenced a blockade of Greece.

The Germans claim to have captured the summit of Hill 304, a very important point on the west bank of the Meuse, opposite Verdun.

BATTLE AT VERDUN.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting at midnight on Thursday, said: There was considerable reciprocal shelling in the vicinity of the Thiepval Ridge.

Thursday's midnight French official statement reports: On the left bank of the Meuse, west of Verdun, there is a lively artillery struggle in the region of Hill 304.

ENEMY CLAIMS HILL 304.

A Berlin official message claims the capture of the summit of Hill 304, west of the Meuse.

FRENCH DETERMINATION

TO WIN THE WAR.

PARIS, Dec. 8.

After a secret session the French Chamber of Deputies expressed confidence in M. Briand, the French Premier, by 344 votes to 160.

It was resolved that the Chamber, taking note of the Government's declaration upon the reorganisation of the High Command, approves of its resolution to concentrate upon the general conduct of the war; and is confident that the Government will make any sacrifices or efforts necessary to gain the victory.

THE HIGH COMMANDS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.

The "New York Times" says that Washington officials have received information on the basis of which they anticipate important changes in the French commands. These are the result of the secret sessions of the Chamber of Deputies. It is believed that there is a likelihood that General Joffre will retire, in which event he will probably be succeeded by General Nivelle, now commander at Verdun.

BRITAIN'S LARGE ARMY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.

Mr Frederic Coudert, a prominent New York lawyer who was recently on the Western front, says that after the war Britain will have the largest and best-equipped army in Europe. Next spring her output of munitions will be quadrupled.

NEAR MONASTIR.

ENEMY COUNTER-ATTACKS.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

An official report issued in Paris at midnight on Thursday stated: The enemy is bombarding our positions round Monastir. Fresh counter-attacks on the Servian positions on the northern slopes at Sokol succeeded in carrying a portion of the height recently captured by the Servians.

South of Seres the British cleared up a Turkish trench and brought back prisoners.

FALL OF BUCHAREST.

ENEMY DELIGHTED.

ROUMANIAN ARMY

CONSIDERED TO BE STILL INTACT.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

Details are coming in of the fall of Bucharest city. It is announced in Berlin that Captain Lange early on December 5 was sent to the commander of the Bucharest forces with a letter from von Mackensen, demanding the surrender of the fortress. A second letter informed the commander of the Bucharest forces that fire would be opened if Captain Lange failed to return in 24 hours.

A Roumanian general received Captain Lange at the outposts, blindfolded him, and motored to Bucharest. Captain Lange returned before the expiration of the 24 hours, saying that the commander refused to accept von Mackensen's terms, as Bucharest was an open town. German cavalry detachments on the morning of the 6th took possession of a fort on the northern front. Later, the Fifth Army occupied the other forts. The resistance of the Roumanian infantry was soon overcome. The Danube army then penetrated the line of forts, and entered the town.

SAVING ARTILLERY.

A wireless message from Rome says:—Petrograd reports state that the abandonment of Bucharest was delayed as long as possible in order to save the artillery and supplies of provisions and munitions. The Roumanian army is still considered intact, and is retiring to pre-arranged positions, where the Russians are concentrating.

A Petrograd message says that all the cannon defending the Bucharest forts were saved. The Roumanian army is intact, and retired in good order.

DELIGHTED EMPEROR.

The German Emperor telegraphed to the Empress:—"Bucharest has been captured. What a magnificent success! We are on the way to complete victory, which will be gained by God's grace."

There is great jubilation throughout Austria and Germany. The German Emperor has telegraphed his congratulations to von Mackensen.

It is reported through Amsterdam that the news of the fall of the capital was received with intense enthusiasm in Germany. The streets were crowded directly the newspapers were issued, and speeches were delivered in all the restaurants and theatres. Von Hindenburg, the Emperor, von Ludendorff, and von Mackensen received ovations. The Church bells were rung, according to the Government's orders. The public, however, was disappointed owing to the absence of large captures of prisoners and booty. Nevertheless they realise a real military achievement in the shortening of the front from 450 miles to 125 miles.

ARMY REMNANT SURRENDERS.

The German evening communique says that the Roumanian division that was cut off at Orsova was caught at the Alt River on December 6 and forced to surrender. Eight thousand men and 26 guns were taken.

An Austrian communique says that Russian pressure in the Carpathians has considerably diminished. Weak attacks in the Trotus Valley were repulsed.

The message adds: December 6 was a day of revenge for Roumania's base treason, when her fourth enemy and her capital were captured.

MURDER AND PILLAGE.

A New York message states:—The United Press correspondent says that anarchy and panic are following the German advance through Roumania. Murder, pillage, and every kind of lawlessness are committed by roving gypsies. There are pitiful scenes of desolation. The German army marches indifferently through the devastated areas without attempting to put down disorder or relieve misery.

ENEMY REPORT.

A German official message claims the capture of 9200 more prisoners in Roumania.

SINKING OF ARABIA.

GERMAN REASONS.

TAKEN FOR TRANSPORT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.

Germany in reply to the American Note has given some extraordinary reasons for her act in sinking the P. and O. steamer Arabia—which was on her way from Australia to London.

The commander of the submarine, says the German Note, mistook the Arabia for a transport because the vessel was not painted in light colours like other P. and O. steamers. The Arabia was not travelling the regular route. Several similar steamers passed by the submarine on the same unusual course. Many Chinese and other coloured persons were visible aboard the Arabia corresponding with "workmen soldiers." The captain of the submarine did not see any women and children. Therefore he concluded the Arabia was a transport, and attacked without delay.

"REGRETTABLE MISTAKE."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.

Commenting on that portion of the Note in which it is stated that if it is proved that the Arabia was an ordinary passenger steamer, the torpedoing will be a regrettable mistake, the United States officials point out that at the time of the Sussex case America stipulated that there must be no more "regrettable mistakes." The officials do not consider that the Note presents a strong case for Germany.

SEVEN SHIPS SUNK.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

Seven vessels were sunk by submarines yesterday—three Danish, two Spanish, and one Russian and one Norwegian.

The Danish steamer Nexos, 1013 tons, and the Spanish steamer Julian Benito have been sunk by a submarine.

A Swedish sailing ship was set on fire by a German submarine in the North Sea. The crew was rescued.

BRITISH ECONOMY.

LONDON, Dec. 7.

The King and the Royal household some time ago adopted the practice of going without meat on two days weekly.

GREECE BLOCKADED

ALLIES' DECISION.

RESULT OF OUTRAGES.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

The allied Governments have decided to blockade Greece until they are given reparation for the outrages committed against the Allies and the Venizelists in Athens.

Athens was decorated with flags in honour of the fall of Bucharest.

All French and English residents have quitted the city.

Another message says that allied subjects are going aboard vessels at the Piraeus.

There have been many dastardly outrages upon Venizelists, including an attack on the Mayor of Athens, who is 73 years old. He was wounded with bayonets and beaten with butts of rifles, and his beard was partly torn out. He was dragged through the streets while covered with blood, and his house was wrecked and looted. Other prominent Venizelists were similarly outraged. The mob fired off fusillades recklessly in the streets, in order to prove that the Venizelists and Allied detachments had been overpowered. Some of the Venizelists opened fire on reservists who were besieging and wrecking houses.

The Government Press pretends that the relations between Greece and the Allies have improved. Really, diplomatic relations have been suspended.

A "New York Herald" despatch from Athens says that the Royalists have made Athens a slaughter-house. The homes of the Venizelists have been looted. Women suffered the grossest indignities. The King's troops tried to force utterances from Venizelist prisoners. If they refused they were beaten on their heads and bodies with rifles. Nurses saw men tortured. Some had their eyes gouged out. One was prodded with knives till he died. Greek Red Cross nurses were maltreated in many instances. This barbarity has been reported to the American Minister.

NEED FOR HASTE.

Lord Denman, in a letter to the newspapers, says that he visited Athens last July. There he met a number of prominent Venizelists, some of whom are suffering from the present outrages. The lot of the humbler Venizelists must be even more serious. He fears that many have been done to death like rats in the streets of Athens, and that atrocities may be committed which will equal the enemy's achievements in Belgium and Servia. The new Government must not delay an instant in urging drastic action on the part of the Allies. Every day is precious. The new Foreign Secretary must realise the inadvisability of recognising two Governments. King Constantine must be held to strict accountability for his complicity in the crimes committed.

ITALY AND WAR.

SUPPORT OF ALLIES.

ROME, Dec. 7.

The Italian Chamber of Deputies, by an overwhelming majority, accepted the motion put forward by the Prime Minister, Signor Boselli, to shelve for six months the Socialist pacifist resolution. M. Boselli urged the Chamber to do nothing to suggest that Italy was not heartily supporting the Allies.

ITALIAN FRONT.

LONDON, Dec. 7.

An Italian official message states:—We repulsed two successive attacks on the Carso. Our aeroplanes bombed aviation sheds at Prosecco, and floating hangars in Trieste.

Two Italian seaplanes bombed an air shed in Trieste.

THE DEPORTATIONS.

POLES BEING ILL-USED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.

The Paris correspondent of the "New York Times" has obtained a copy of a Polish Deputy's speech, made at a secret session of the Reichstag, and published in a Polish newspaper. The Deputy, Tropczynski, asserted that the Poles were being deported like the Belgians. On August 1 25,000 Poles were working in Germany, where they had been enticed by contracts, and then not allowed to return. Many were forcibly transported to Germany, their employers paying them what they pleased. Many Poles were whipped until they signed renewals of their contracts. The frontier sentries shot several when they were attempting to escape.

It is reported from Rome that the Popes' Allocution at the coming secret Consistory will be so couched as to convey impartiality, while reprobating all violations by the belligerents of human and Divine laws. There will be a direct reference to the deportations of the Belgians as a war measure unprecedented in the history of civilised nations.

ORGANISING MAN-POWER

LONDON, Dec. 7.

It is officially stated that the Admiralty, the Ministry of Munitions, and the Army Council have agreed to secure the early calling to the colours of all fit semi-skilled and unskilled men, up to the age of 31, whose release from controlled and Government establishments will not interfere with the output of munitions.

BRITISH COPPER.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

The Minister for Munitions has prohibited the use of copper in manufactures, and the sale or purchase of copper outside the United Kingdom. He requires manufacturers to deliver returns showing their stocks of unwrought copper.

ROLL OF HONOUR.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

Sub-lieutenant Alfred Mann, of the Naval Air Service, and a resident of Sydney, was killed in an aeroplane accident.

MERCHANT SHIPPING.

LONDON, Dec. 7.

The steamers Maitai (from Wellington, November 9) and Sierra (from Sydney, November 15), have arrived at San Francisco. The ship Lindisfarne (from Sydney, October 14) has arrived at Caleta Calosa, Chili.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA.

BERNE, Dec. 7.

The Prussian Lutheran Synod has confidentially circularised its pastors, instructing them to hold special Christmas services to stimulate zeal in the war, to emphasise Germany's divine mission, and to denounce the Entente as Satan's allies.

TO WIN THE WAR.

THE NEW CABINET.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S POLICY.

SUPPORT BY LABOUR PARTY.

STATE TO CONTROL INDUSTRIES.

LONDON, Dec. 8.

Mr. Lloyd George spent a very busy day yesterday (Thursday) in work in connection with the forming of the new Cabinet. He made good progress. His most important achievement was his arrival at an understanding with the Labour party.

All sections of labour were represented at a conference, and the majority of representatives finally decided that Labour would take a part in the new Government. Mr Arthur Henderson will be a member of the War Committee, without portfolio, and he will devote his whole energy to the war.

Mr. Lloyd George informed the Labour conference that the single plank of his political platform was: The vigorous prosecution of the war to a victorious conclusion. He said that a serious task lay before the country, and it could only be accomplished by utilising to the utmost the entire energies of the nation. He fully admitted that labour had already played a great part; but greater demands would yet be made upon labour, as well as upon other classes of the community.

Mr. Lloyd George added that there was every prospect of success, but success depended on an increased output of munitions. Hence, tremendous responsibilities were thrown on labour. These responsibilities made it only equitable that labour should have some say in the direction of affairs. The Government would contain a real Labour Minister, presiding over a new Labour Department, which would take over the whole of the Labour work of the Board of Trade.

Labour members searchingly cross-examined Mr. Lloyd George, and were gratified to learn that his policy practically amounts to State control of all industries and means of transport by land and sea, in order that the country's man-power may be directed into the best channels. Every effort will be made to increase the production of home-grown food. Farmers will be provided with the most modern machinery. Prices of food will be rigorously controlled.

LABOUR AND WEALTH.

The Labourites pressed Mr. Lloyd George particularly for information regarding the conscription of labour and wealth.

The new Prime Minister intimated that, as regards the former his policy would be in the direction of regulating the work of the whole of the manhood of the country, so that no class could complain of being unfairly treated. Regarding the conscription of wealth he foreshadowed a scheme of controlling investments and savings on lines existing in the case of certain classes of American securities. This would place the realised wealth of the country at the Government's disposal. There may also be a large extension of the war profits tax, so that all profits will be calculated on the average of three years before the war, and all in excess of this amount will go to the State.

A Court circular was issued last night announcing that the King had received Mr. Lloyd George in audience, and that Mr. Lloyd George had accepted the offices of Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury.

PROBABLE MINISTERS.

The newspapers are busily speculating on the personnel of the new Cabinet.

Mr. Lloyd George yesterday interviewed Lord Curzon, Lord Robert Cecil, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, and Mr. Walter Long. It is announced that Mr. Samuel (retiring Home Secretary) has declined an invitation to join the new Cabinet.

It is rumoured that Mr. Michael Sadler, Vice-Chancellor of Leeds University, will become Minister for Education. Sir Albert Stanley, managing director of the London tube railways, Lord Devonport (chairman of London Port Authority), and Mr. Hichens, chairman of Messrs. Cammell and Lairds, are among the business men likely to be asked to assist.

The newspapers publish telegrams of congratulation to Mr. Lloyd George from Mr. Hughes and Mr. Holman.

EXPECTED ANNOUNCEMENT.

It is expected that the names of the members of the new Cabinet will not be announced until Friday. Messrs. Henderson, Brace, Wardle, Barnes, and Hodge are the most likely selections from the Labour party.

WHAT LABOUR WANTS.

The National Labour Council carried a resolution in favour of the Government purchasing all imported essential foodstuffs, commandeering or controlling home products and ships, and placing food in retail markets at prices benefiting the consumer.

The members of the conference, while favouring Mr. Asquith's leadership, made it perfectly clear that they were prepared to serve any Prime Minister who will vigorously prosecute the war.

Subsequently, Mr. Henderson, Mr Ramsay MacDonald, Mr O'Grady, Mr. Snowden, and Mr. Thorne, representing the conference, had a long conference with Mr. Lloyd George.

The Labour party discussed Mr. Lloyd George's proposals during the afternoon for two hours. It was afterwards officially announced that the party had decided to take part in the new Government.

It is understood that Mr. Arthur Henderson and Mr. G. N. Barnes will enter the Cabinet.

The Central News Agency says that Mr. Lloyd George has offered Labour two seats in the Cabinet, one on the War Council, and three under-secretaryships.

IRISH QUESTION.

The Labour party passed a resolution hoping the Government would endeavour to settle the Irish question, with a view to obtaining the full exercise of the nation's and Empire's forces.

HOUSE ADJOURNED.

The House of Commons was crowded today, but the sitting was without incident, and the House adjourned until Tuesday, after sitting ten minutes.

LIBERAL WAR GROUP.

Thirty members of the Liberal war group met in the House of Commons this afternoon, and passed a resolution that it was of paramount importance that the formation of the Government should be completed without delay for the vigorous prosecution of the war. The members pledged their active support for Mr. Lloyd George to that end.

Mr. Asquith will address the Liberal party on Friday, when he will explain the circumstances of his resignation.

The "Evening Standard" says the Labour leaders have consented to participate in the new Government on condition that the Government immediately adopts an extensive control of mines, shipping, and land.

AMERICAN COMMENT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.

The "New York World" says that the British Cabinet crisis is of greater moral value to Germany than the events at Bucharest. In the criticism of the Ministry, says the paper, there has not been unanimity regarding the direction in which Mr. Asquith has failed.

The "Sun" says it is inconceivable that the war can be conducted without Mr. Asquith at the Council table. Public opinion will doubtless demand that he retain some position in the Government.

It has been said that Mr. Lloyd George hopes to hold office, in the event of Mr. Asquith's followers actively opposing him, with the help of the Unionists, the Labour party, and the "war section" of the Liberals. When the Coalition Cabinet was formed in June, 1915, the state of parties in the House of Commons was approximately as follows:—

| | |
|---|---|
| Liberals | 260 |
| Unionists | 284 |
| Nationalists | 74 |
| Labour | 37 |
| Independents | 10 |

The Liberals had held office by reason of the support of the Labour party and most of the Nationalists.

STATE GOVERNMENT'S MESSAGE.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S STRONG HANDS.

Mr. Holman said yesterday that on behalf of the State Government he, as Premier, had sent the following cable to Mr. Lloyd George on receiving the news that the task of forming a new British Cabinet had been entrusted to him:—"New South Wales Ministers send heartfelt wishes for complete success in the great task now before you. The deep concern which the crisis has created is now followed by profound gratification at finding that the further guidance of the struggle is in your strong hands. We are profoundly confident that your wisdom and energy will shortly extricate our cause from the difficulties which now beset us."

WAR NOTES.

WEST OF THE MEUSE.

Two items of news from the Western front should not be overlooked. The first, contained in the French official message issued at midnight on Wednesday, and published yesterday, was to the effect that an enemy attack on the slopes of Hill 304, left of the Meuse, owing to the French machine-gun fire, only gained a footing in some advanced trench elements. The second is contained in the Berlin official message, published this morning, which claims the capture of the summit of Hill 304. Those who have not forgotten the details of the enemy's failure around Verdun during the first half of the present year will learn from these two statements that the enemy has at least made a convulsive attempt to resume the offensive on the western side of the Meuse. It is as yet too early to attempt to divine his object, but it is possible that his latest attack represents an effort to mitigate the ill-effects of the recapture by the French of forts Douaumont and Vaux, on the eastern bank of the river. If the Berlin message is correct, the enemy has made a very important gain, as Hill 304 has always been looked upon as the key to the famous Mort Homme position, which, in turn, may be considered the key to the left bank of the Meuse. The capture of both heights would not necessarily mean the fall of Verdun. Before that end could be achieved from the western side of the Meuse, the enemy would have to capture the Charney Ridge, nearly four miles farther back, on which stands the outer line of de Riviere's forts, originally constructed for the protection of Verdun from attack on this side of the river. The loss of these hills to the French, however, would be serious, as it would mean that they would no longer have the advantage of those artillery positions on the western bank of the river which have prevented the enemy on the opposite side of the stream making an outflanking move by way of Poivre Hill.

PREVIOUS PREMATURE CLAIM.

The significance of the whole affair, however, depends upon the accuracy of the enemy's claim, and in this respect we can only base our estimate of its value on the general nature of Germany's official messages in the past. In the Roumanian campaign we have found Germany's communiques to be comparatively free of mis-statements, and certainly more enlightening than the Roumanian official messages. But Germany has had a series of successes in Roumania, and has accordingly displayed no desire to paint the lily in her communiques. It has suited her purpose to adhere to the truth in cases where the truth has been wholesome from her own point of view. It is when her efforts fail or only partly succeed that she displays her ingenuity in the matter of falsifying official news. A glaring instance of this policy occurred previously in the very region where Germany now claims her latest success. This was on March 14 last, when the enemy was making his great frontal attack on the Mort Homme position. On that date the Silesians succeeded in winning two positions just under the crest of Hill 265. This was in reality only an outlying spur of the ridge of which the Mort Homme is the main feature. The capture of these two positions rendered this outlying spur untenable. Berlin immediately announced the capture of the famous Mort Homme position. The claim was absolutely false, as the French still held that point, and continue to hold it to the present day. It is therefore highly probable that history has repeated itself at Hill 304, and that the enemy has gained only a certain amount of success on the slopes of this hill. This view is supported by the French message issued at midnight on Thursday, which only announces intense artillery bombardments in the region of Hill 304.

ENEMY'S EARLIER EFFORTS.

It is not improbable that the present attack on Hill 304 is being carried out on similar lines to the previous futile attempts of the enemy to gain this important height. After the frontal attack on Mort Homme mentioned above had failed, the enemy decided to attack this position from the flank. This necessitated an attack on Hill 304 as the outstanding feature of the operation. A fresh bombardment on the western side of the river began on March 17, and lasted for three days, the enemy infantry attacking along the line between Avocourt and Malancourt at midday on March 20. The intention was to reach the northern slopes of Hill 304 from the direction of Malancourt, and the western slopes from the direction of Avocourt. There is a long, gentle slope on the western side of the hill, the lower section being covered by the Wood of Avocourt. Towards evening the enemy, with the aid of liquid fire, had fought his way to the edge of this wood, and the next day or two was spent in building a redoubt to assist in the further advance up the western slopes. The position had become serious by March 29, and on that day the French delivered one of their most brilliant counter-attacks against the enemy's new positions. It proved most successful, the enemy being driven back close on a quarter of a mile. The redoubt, which they had taken such trouble to build, fell into the hands of the French. The enemy repeatedly counter-attacked, but without success. Such was the nature and result of his early attack on this hill, the summit of which he now claims to have captured. The future will show whether he has succeeded to this extent or not. Of course there have been cases where one side has secured positions on the slope of a hill or ridge which renders the summit untenable. We then see one side claiming the capture of the summit and the other side denying the claim, when in reality the ground in dispute is a kind of "No Man's Land," and is occupied by neither side. In the absence of any direct denial of the German claim, it is possible that some such position exists on Hill 304 at present.

ROUMANIA.

Apart from this development on the Verdun front, the military operations reported from the various other regions are somewhat meagre. The Roumanian position shows no additional change since the fall of the capital and the capture of the important railway junction to the north of it. The unofficial details of the events leading up to the Roumanian retirement from Bucharest do not indicate anything in the nature of a final struggle within the precincts of the city itself. The forts had undoubtedly been dismantled, and the fact that they fell into the hands of the enemy's cavalry patrols proves that no attempt was made to utilise them as defensive works. The withdrawal had apparently been going on for some time, and there is reason to hope that, in the new positions towards which the Roumanian forces are retiring, the Allies will find themselves stronger than ever. It may be that this new line will lie roughly to the south of the Buzeu River, and cover the railway junction town of Buzeu. Here the Allies will be served by an excellent lateral line of railway in the rear, stretching from the western side of the Cernavoda Bridge to Nehoutz, below Buzeu Pass. This lateral line will be fed by the direct lines from Russia through Central and Eastern Moldavia. We have had no further hint regarding the probable fate of the second Roumanian army, below Predeal Pass, whose main line of retreat was cut by the capture of Ploesci. Although there is still a doubt regarding the safety of this force, there is additional evidence this morning that the main bulk of the Roumanian armies is still intact. Much depends now upon whether the Allies will shortly be in a position to take the offensive in Roumania, or whether they will be compelled to give the enemy time to settle down to trench warfare when he decides to stay his advance, and make preparations to hold the ground he has gained. If he is permitted to do this he will no doubt be able to spare a considerable number of Bulgarian and Turkish troops for operation in some other sphere, and it is more than likely that Bulgaria will be persistent in her demands for a greater effort against General Sarrail's forces in Macedonia.

OUR NATION'S NEED.

"COURAGE OF ENDURANCE."

PROF. MACINTYRE'S ADDRESS.

Speaking at the Scots' College yesterday after the students had sung several patriotic songs, Professor Macintyre, Moderator-General of the Presbyterian Church in Australia, said he was reminded of an old song, "When Night is Darkest Dawn is Nearest."

The boys of that college, he went on to say, might proudly boast, "We are ancients of the earth, and in the morning of the times," for they were living in what might be described as the most important and most eventful period of the world's history. They were living in days which would decide for good or for evil the destiny of the British Empire. Every part of the Empire was being called upon in these terrible times—Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotsmen, Canadians, Australians, and New Zealanders—to show that they were true to their breeding as Britons. In this part of the world 110 of the old boys of the Scots' College had done their share for King and country by answering the call of duty as soldiers.

Proceeding, Professor Macintyre said that the nation was now passing through a new trial; a test which was new to their race. This trial and this test would show whether they had or had not the stamina to carry on the war with renewed energy and increased strength. Their patriotism was being tested not only by the courage of the battlefield, the fighting spirit, but by the courage of endurance. With his whole heart, he said, he trusted that the British race would not fail in the final test—the test of courageous and unflinching endurance. They were now in the darkest hour of a desperate struggle for supremacy. Only with faith in God and the courage of endurance could they hope to be victorious. Sustained by the courage of endurance they could wait till the darkness disappeared and the light of victory brought with it a blessed peace, not only for themselves but for the world.

The "Financial News" strongly approves of the Commonwealth Government's decision to modify the war-time profits tax, and exempt mining companies. The Government, it says, has exercised sound common sense. The expansion of the Broken Hill Proprietary's Newcastle ironworks can now proceed unshackled.

ATTACKED BY SHARK

MAN KILLED AT MIDDLE HARBOUR.

WIFE'S HEROIC ACTION.

A shocking tragedy occurred at Middle Harbour yesterday morning, when a man was killed through being bitten by a shark.

Mr. Walter Cromwell German, aged 41, motor engineer, a native of England, residing at Torquay-street, Middle Harbour, at about 9 a.m., was, as is his custom, bathing with his wife in front of their residence. Mrs. German was separated from him by a few yards. She is not able to swim, and was not in deep water. Mrs. German heard a scream, and saw her husband struggling in the water, with blood all around him. She rushed to him. In consequence of her cries, a neighbour, Mrs. Evans, arrived, whilst Mrs. German was struggling to save her husband, and the two women carried Mr. German's body ashore.

The commotion made by Mrs. German evidently frightened the shark, because it made off, and did not make any further attacks during the attempts at rescue.

The shark attacked its victim directly from the front, its teeth almost encircling deceased's body. The wounds were terrible. The whole of deceased's chest was torn away, revealing the heart and lungs, besides severing the right forearm to the elbow. One of the deceased's legs was cut clean to the bone at the knee, this, it is surmised, being caused through the shark's fin.

Mrs. German after her brave attempt to save her husband, became delirious.

Fishermen in boats yesterday scoured the waters, but were unable to land the shark.

THE LONG SITTING.

REVIEW BY PREMIER.

NATIONAL PARTY SOLIDARITY.

Although the majority of Ministers were in their offices yesterday, there was very little doing in the Government departments, so far as politics are concerned. Everybody was extremely tired after the record long session of the Legislative Assembly. There was a remarkable absence of members of Parliament from the Government departments.

The Premier was in his office as usual, and showed very little signs of the exhausting experience through which he had passed. Mr. Holman explained that this was because he had been able to get home for a substantial rest at a comparatively early hour on Thursday night. He pointed out, however, that before being released from the Chamber, he had been in charge of the House for a stretch of nearly 14 hours while the Estimates of the Premier's Department were being debated by the Opposition. Mr. Holman expressed his keen appreciation of the fact that, although an absolute record sitting had been established, the proceedings had been orderly and without a "scene." "Other Ministers," said the Premier, "were on duty practically the whole time, particularly Mr. Fitzpatrick, who has undoubtedly won his spurs as a Minister in this respect. The progress with the Estimates was largely due to his energy and organisation." Mr. Holman also expressed his gratification that, with the exception of the Works Department Estimates, on which the closure was applied, the whole of the figures were exhaustively discussed. On several occasions, he said, individual members were "gagged" to the general advantage of everybody concerned, but there was no general stoppage of the debate in any other department.

"It is further a matter that I can't help looking back upon with gratification," said Mr. Holman, "that, although an exhaustive debate on the finances, sprung hurriedly, was bound to bring up innumerable searching questions which would test the solidarity of the newly-formed National Party in many unexpected ways, the unity and harmony of members has been unimpaired by the experience. The real solidarity of the National Party has been strikingly demonstrated by the test in a seven-times heated furnace which they have just undergone. I have every confidence in the party's successfully weathering any further storms that may lie before it."

MOULDERS' STRIKE.

CONFERENCE ARRANGED.

Mr. Beeby, Minister for Labour and Industry, has arranged a conference between representatives of the Moulders' Union and of the Iron Trades Employers' Association. This will be held at the Department of Labour and Industry this morning. The first matter to be discussed will be the terms upon which the men on strike will resume work. A member of the strike committee stated yesterday that it was expected that the employers would put forward the terms, after which they would be considered by a mass meeting of the men. He looked upon the holding of the conference as a hopeful sign that the strike, which has now been in progress for 11 weeks, would soon terminate.

AWARDED MILITARY CROSS.

CAPTAIN GIBLIN.

In a letter addressed to his mother, Captain (Dr.) W. E. Giblin, R.A.M.C., of Chatswood and Sydney, who is now attached to the North Royal Lancashires in France, remarks casually, "I suppose you will hear that I have been granted the Military Cross. I do not know what for; I suppose others do." No particulars beyond this characteristic note, however, have come to hand. Captain Giblin, who is 30 years of age, is a son of the late N. F. Giblin, who was at one time manager of the Bank of New Zealand, and afterwards official assignee in Sydney. He was educated at the North Sydney Grammar School, and passed through the Sydney University. Later he was sent to New Guinea for two years to study tropical diseases. Twelve months ago he left for England, where he enlisted. His eldest brother is manager of the Edna Central Gold Mine, in Western Australia, and his younger brother is farming at Forbes, where his mother resides.

LIEUTENANT HERBERT.

A cablegram has been received by Mrs. Herbert, Mosman, saying that her son, Lieutenant Auberon S. S. Herbert, of the Royal Rifle Brigade, has been awarded the Military Cross.

MR. H. E. BUDDEN.

RETURNING TO SYDNEY.

Mr. H. E. Budden, War Chest Commissioner, will be compelled by private and family reasons to return to Australia after Christmas, when he will have completed over two years' incessant active service.

The general council of the A.C.F. has selected Mr. Woodburn, of Victoria, to succeed him, and he has now left the front for London. Mr. Woodburn yesterday cabled to the War Chest officials as follows:—"Appreciate executive's confidence shown my appointment succeeding Budden. All associated regret exceedingly losing his services. Will do utmost continue his work. Biographs and coffee stalls doing fine service through wretched conditions. Australia's fine efforts doing much to alleviate. Authorities lean on Australian Comforts Fund to increasingly great extent with continuing happy results and benefit, our purchase 'Tommy' cookers proving exceptionally valuable in winter trenches."

COAL BOARD.

THE PRICE OF PEACE.

PUBLIC INTERESTS.

MR. JUSTICE EDMUNDS'S VIEW.

The work of settling the outstanding matters in dispute between the miners and coal owners was commenced yesterday by the special board, of which Mr. Justice Edmunds is chairman. While pointing out that the public would most probably have to pay a higher price for coal as the result of the concessions to the men, his Honor urged that when an agreement was reached it should be made of such a permanent nature as to ensure an uninterrupted and full supply of coal to consumers. If an agreement was made for, say, five years, and the people were assured that for this period, at least, there would be no further dislocation of the industry, they would, his Honor suggested, be quite willing to bear a reasonable increase in price.

After Mr. Justice Edmunds had fully explained the position, the board sat in private as a conference, to discuss and deal with the matters at issue.

The proceedings opened in public, the board being as follows:—Chairman, Mr. Justice Edmunds; employers' assessors, Messrs. A. E. O. Sellars, R. A. Harle, and N. J. Clarke; employees' assessors, Messrs. J. M. Baddeley, A. E. Phillips, and D. H. Duncombe.

His Honor said that the order already made, provided that underground employees should get eight hours bank to bank. It was quite clear that it should be extended beyond merely underground employees, and should at least include the persons handling the coal in transport from the pit mouth to the waggon. That would be the subject of a supplementary order. Then, again, it was obvious that there were some others who just worked for some short time either before or after the definite time of eight hours bank to bank. They included on-setters, pump minders, fan men, horse-keepers, furnace men, and men engaged in surveying, and they were also excepted from the order.

The order then arranged that on-setters, pump minders, and others mentioned were to be allowed to work more than the eight hours definitely expressed, provided they were to be paid an overtime rate for such service. The board was not fixing the rate permanently for these employees. The rate of overtime which would be ultimately decided between the parties was one of the matters in dispute, and it was intended to proceed with that as the first issue for adjudication. It was necessary to have such a rate here, because of his undertaking to compensate the owners for such loss as may be incurred by carrying out this order if thereby their profits were reduced below a reasonable rate, and for the purpose of making the computations he intended to express overtime for the time being, at time and a quarter.

MUST ABIDE BY DECISION.

"There is another matter," said his Honor, "which I ought to advert to. All the parties have given me their plain undertaking that they will loyally accept and abide by my decision, and you will understand that unless it was given it was impossible to do the work. I would not proceed one day unless on that plain understanding. I am not complicating it by reference to some outstanding disputes. We cannot expect the traditions of the past to be broken immediately and a complete change ensue in this or any other industry. It might possibly be that there might be a stoppage in some small, or even some important, mine. If such a thing should occur it would compel me to consider whether, notwithstanding that, I should go on with the work. But I impress on the parties if such things do occur they cannot occur often. Such things cannot go on without notice, otherwise the work we are attempting to do becomes useless. They would be undermining the whole foundations of our work. Even one case does that to some extent. I, therefore, asked both parties to put the undertaking formally in writing and they agreed. I am not getting it into my hand as a weapon to use afterwards against anybody, but only as a record to which I can refer later on if it becomes necessary."

His Honor added that he could not refrain from expressing his personal opinion that, the industry having settled down into normal conditions, the adjudication upon matters of dispute ought, as a matter of policy, to be done by the ordinary legal tribunals. The Prime Minister had, however, given his promise that this tribunal would go on with the inquiry. He would go on, therefore, and endeavour to get through in as short a time as possible.

Mr. Baddeley said the employees did not wish to work overtime; but owing to the proprietors saying it was imperative in some instances they put the suggestion forward that the matter should be gone into immediately.

His Honor said he would suggest that if possible each side should put the whole of their case through one witness. He suggested that the parties should draw up a proof of what their witnesses would be required to state.

Mr. Willis said he would like to draw attention to the fact that the miners had not taken advantage of the present situation to enforce claims for increases in wages. The 20 and 26 per cent. which they were asking for now was really a claim made 12 months ago on the grounds of the abnormal increase in the cost of living. In some districts, notably the northern district, they had not received any general increase since 1908.

Mr. M'Donald: That is not correct.

Mr. Willis said the agreements that had been entered into with the employers would all have run out by the end of the year. The southern district award, as a matter of fact, would expire on December 13. They understood the Prime Minister would provide a tribunal, and if that was understood they were now prepared to knuckle down to fixing the question of wages.

Mr. C. M. M'Donald, secretary of the Northern Colliery Proprietors' Association, said that the claims of 20 and 26 per cent. had to some extent been met by certain increases granted as the result of compulsory and private conferences between the parties.

His Honor said he was glad to hear that a conference had been arranged. He thought it very probable that the result of these proceedings would be that the general public would have to pay an increased price for their coal. He thought they would be quite willing to pay what would be a fair increase, and would congratulate themselves on obtaining a full and continuous supply of coal. Therefore it would be one of the elements for consideration throughout as to whether any increase proposed will be fair. The Judge exhorted the parties to express, if they could, the results arrived at as being definitely binding for a reasonable period in advance. He suggested five years, and said that if they could say to the general public "You are assured of peace in this industry for five years; you are assured of a constant supply of coal during that time; you are relieved of the apprehension which recent events must have caused you of a terrible catastrophe in this country during that period at least." Then they will probably say "The price you ask us to pay, though it is high, is not too high for the benefits we obtain under it."

The board and advocates then went into conference, and at 4 p.m. adjourned till Monday at 12 o'clock.

LIGHT AND POWER.

NORTH SHORE.

ALL GAS RESTRICTIONS REMOVED.

CONCESSIONS IN CITY.

The Gas Board yesterday decided to revoke previous notifications limiting the supply of gas to consumers supplied by the North Shore Company. Gas may now be used in that district for power and lighting purposes at all times as before the strike.

Consumers supplied by the Katoomba and Leura Gas Company are similarly relieved.

In districts supplied by the Australian Gaslight Company, on and from Monday next gas may be used between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. for industrial purposes, and before the hour of 8 a.m. or after 5 p.m. for lighting, heating, and cooking in hotels, restaurants, and shops, and for all other trading purposes.

FERRY SERVICES.

A further revision of the ferry services is promised for next week, when the present timetable will be considerably improved upon.

MINERS' COAL TICKETS.

KURRI KURRI, Friday.

The Hebburn Colliery was the first to stop working since the resumption of work. It appears that before the strike the management had assured the monthly coal supply tickets to its employees, but on the resumption of work had refused to honour them.

Work was resumed this morning on the understanding that miners' coal will be available on Thursday next.

MR. HUGHES'S APPEAL.

MINERS' PATRIOTIC REPLY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, this morning received the following telegram from Mr. Baddeley, president of the Coal and Shale Employees' Federation:—"The council has recommended members to take only recognised holidays, in view of unemployment and shortage of coal." Mr. Hughes had appealed to the miners to restrict the usual Christmas holidays as much as possible.

The Prime Minister said he regarded the response to the appeal made as quite satisfactory. As he read it, it meant that the men would take only Christmas Day, Boxing Day, and New Year's Day.

NEW REGULATIONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A new regulation under the War Precautions Act was issued to-day in respect of the use of coal. It provides that where any person, firm, or company is prohibited from using coal or coke in excess of five tons, such persons, firm, or company may be required by the Minister for the Navy, or a coal board to permit any other persons, firm, or company, who was not prohibited from using coal, to take over this supply or any part of it. The rate fixed for coal or coke taken in pursuance of this regulation is the cost price to the holder, including the cost of delivery, plus 10 per cent. In default of an agreement between the parties concerned as to the price it shall be determined by the Minister or the coal board, and no action in respect to the matter can be instituted or maintained. The regulations declare it to be an offence to refuse delivery of coal, when applied for under this regulation, if the applicant holds the permit of the Minister or a coal board.

The use of gas or electricity for the purpose of the display of any advertising device or design is prohibited as from three days after the issue of the special regulation which was issued to-day, unless the consent of the Minister or coal board is first obtained.

NORTHERN MINERS.

THREE TEMPORARY STOPPAGES.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The Newcastle and Dudley collieries were idle to-day, while the Hebburn was not working yesterday afternoon. At the Newcastle pit a few screen men were told to work at the back of the screen instead of at the front. They refused to obey orders, and the whole pit was thrown idle. A meeting of the men was held subsequently, and it was decided that the men should resume work on Monday, and the screen men work as instructed by the manager.

The Dudley colliery did not work, as a number of the wheelers attended the funeral of a man who had been employed at the pit. The Hebburn mine resumed work to-day.

MUSWELLBROOK COLLIERY.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

Mr. W. Brennan, secretary of the Colliery Employees' Federation, when seen to-day, admitted that there had not been a resumption of work at Muswellbrook colliery. In October last, he stated, the management refused to comply with the conditions of the agreement. He (Mr. Brennan) saw the manager of the colliery in October, with a view of arranging for the restarting of work under the terms of the agreement, and for the claims of the management to be considered. Afterwards the manager declined to do that. Mr. Brennan added that he would visit Muswellbrook to-morrow to see the manager, in the hope of bringing about a resumption of work on the old terms.

WEEK'S COAL EXPORTS.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

For the week ended to-day the total quantity of coal shipped for interstate and oversea exports was 45,060 tons, of which 37,710 tons were for the Commonwealth trade, and 7350 for bunkering oversea steamers. It was not till Wednesday that the shipments commenced, and on that day the exports reached 8560 tons. Both yesterday and to-day all the cranes have been shipping coal, and large quantities were loaded. Details of the exports were:—Victoria, 14,160 tons; South Australia, 12,250; Western Australia, 6140; Tasmania, 3490; Queensland, 650; New Guinea, 320; Guam, 3650; England, 2300; Hongkong, 700; Fiji, 400; Japan, 300.

MINING CONDITIONS.

APPLICATION FOR SUSPENSION.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

A notice of an application made by Mr. John Brown, of the firm of J. and A. Brown, for the suspension of labour conditions for six months on mining leases in the parish of Stockrington, was posted outside the courthouse to-day. The reasons for the application are that the owners are unable to work the seam of coal except at extreme loss owing to the war, the difficulties of securing freights, and the high rate of freights. The notice also states that substantial expenditure had been incurred in mining operations on the leases, and the owners were temporarily unable to continue such operations, and required considerable time to make arrangements.

The area referred to is situated close to the firm's Back Creek and Duckenfield collieries at Minmi. The hearing of the application has been fixed at East Maitland on December 21.

PUNITIVE EXPEDITION.

A punitive expedition, consisting of about 50 English and French sailors, together with native police, under the command of Captain Jackson, landed at Sauwari, near Wala, Malekula, with the object of punishing the tribes concerned in the murder of the trader, Mr. Bridges, and his family. The native village, which was some distance inland, was reached early in the morning, but the natives had fled. After burning the village, the party retired towards the main camp. After leaving the village they were heavily attacked from both sides of the track, the natives firing at point blank range from the thick cane grass jungle. A stiff running fight ensued to within half a mile of the main camp. By the time the camp was reached in the afternoon the ammunition was almost expended. The force lost seven native police killed and one native policeman and a British sailor were severely wounded.

TOTALISATOR.

PROTEST FROM CHURCHES.

DISCOURAGING REPLY.

Mr. James, M.L.A., Minister for Education and Minister in charge of the Totalisator Bill, received a deputation yesterday from the Anglican Synod and the Council of the Civic and Morals Association, in opposition to the Totalisator Bill. It was introduced by Mr. T. Brown, M.L.A., who mentioned that the Civic and Morals Association represented all the Churches, and other bodies as well. "We are opposed," he said, "to extending the area of gambling, and as our community is a pleasure-loving community, and the tendency of the employment of the totalisator is to extend the opportunities of people who are prone to gamble, we do not think its legalisation is a good thing for the community."

The Primate (Archbishop Wright) said the legalisation of the totalisator would give an air of respectability to gambling; the Government itself was practically conducting an organisation for gambling, and many people who had held back from gambling because it was not respectable would feel that the check upon it had been removed when the Government itself had decided to introduce something which would give it support. Again, there were many citizens who felt that they were now being put in a position of paying their just debts, by what might well be called the exploitation of a vice. (Hear, hear.)

The Rev. R. B. S. Hammond presented the resolution carried by the Church of England Synod. They felt, he said, that the Government had already pronounced gambling to be a vice, and had banished it from the streets and the shops, and only allowed it under certain restrictions on the racecourse, yet it was now seeking to legalise a form of it by the introduction of the Totalisator Bill. In the matter of perhaps the fairest form of gambling—that known as two-up—the State had shown its disapproval in such a strong way that it did not allow even a heavy fine. In a time of national crisis he greatly deplored the introduction of such a measure as this. Allowing that gambling was a vice, the deputation deplored the glamour of respectability which was being thrown upon it. (Hear, hear.) Not only did the Royal Commission take evidence in this State, but travelled in New Zealand, Tasmania, South Australia, and Queensland taking evidence upon it, at great cost to the country. It had a right to obtain all the information possible, and having got that information it delivered its verdict. There was no justification for setting aside that verdict; there was no evidence brought forward to show that the verdict was a wrong one; there was no mandate from the people that it should be upset. Moreover, an English Royal Commission had been appointed to inquire into this very matter, and after taking evidence had reported against it. It seemed to him that we had reached a time when the National Government might well exclusively devote itself to things which would promote the success of the war, and that a thing like this could not possibly have any association with or effect upon our efforts relating to the war, except that which was detrimental. If the effort were made to restrict gambling it would be a different thing, but the totalisator was going to give a fresh lease of life to gambling upon the racecourse. The need for individual economy, as well as national economy, was at present overwhelming, and any facilities for allowing people to spend their hard-earned money in trying to get other money which they had not earned, was wrong. (Applause.) It was for one thing calculated to retard recruiting, and it was an offence to do anything which might retard recruiting. In New Zealand, in South Australia, in Tasmania, the result of the introduction of the totalisator had been that the money spent in gambling was doubled in the first five years, and again doubled in ten years—in other words, that an amount of £500,000 in the first year rose to £2,000,000 in the tenth year. The amount of money that went through the machines in the first year of the totalisator in South Australia was £196,746; in the ninth year it was £491,000. The amount spent per year had increased 2½ times in nine years. Somebody had said that the money derived from the totalisator was to be devoted to returned soldiers. It was an insult to the returned soldiers. Then it was said that some of the money would be devoted to charity; it seemed to him that it was a travesty on charity, a very negation of it, a degradation of it, and that the effect it would have upon charity would be to dry up its source.

Rev. A. A. Yeates said the Church represented about 46 per cent. of the population, and surely that was a fair proportion of the whole. It might be conceded that the totalisator was next to two-up the fairest form of gambling, and it was because of that that he objected to the legalisation of any form of the vice.

The Rev. Dr. Carruthers said that to obtain the £200,000 revenue it would be necessary that about two and a half millions should go through the machine.

Mr. James (Minister for Education): It will be about five or six millions.

Dr. Carruthers was glad to have got that out. It was an appalling thing that such a large sum should be spent in gambling to produce such a paltry amount of revenue. Amongst other evils the totalisator would foster gambling amongst the boys and girls.

Other speakers followed.

The Minister in reply said this matter was one of Government policy; not a fad of his own, and was not of his own seeking. The crux of the whole question was—Would gambling be increased by the introduction of the totalisator? The volume of money spent on gambling increased with the increase of the population, and if the deputation could only know the amount of money that passed through the hands of the bookmakers at the present time it would be astounded.

The Rev. R. B. Hammond: Do you think it comes to £5,000,000?

Mr. James: I think it is very much more. He had thought very seriously of abolishing the bookmaker, because a large sum of money was taken from the people's pockets by the bookmakers, and the Government policy was to get some return. It was going to see that the machine was run properly, and any club not running it in a proper way would have its licence cancelled. Of the profits, 7 per cent. would go to the Government, 3 per cent. would be left to the club for the prize-money and for its funds, and the rest would go to the people. The Government claimed that in that way it could regulate gambling; it knew it could not abolish it. As long as a majority of the people thought that gambling should be retained, so long would it be impossible to put it down, and he found that a great number of strong supporters of the Church were in favour of the totalisator.

Rev. R. B. Hammond: Are they in favour of it as opposed to the bookmaker?

Mr. James: Many of them were in favour of it in addition to the bookmaker. An argument had been put forward that the moral standard of the people was lowered in countries where the totalisator was in use. Was Queensland, was South Australia, was Tasmania, was Western Australia, was New Zealand lower in moral standard than Victoria or New South Wales? Now, the deputation had made a point that the report of the Royal Commission of this State a few years ago was opposed to the totalisator. He had carefully read the report, also the evidence upon which it was based, and it seemed to him that the evidence was more in favour of the totalisator than against it. The betting by children should certainly be guarded against.

Rev. R. B. Hammond: Would it be possible to limit the operation of the bill to, say, three years as an experiment?

Mr. James: That suggestion was worth considering, and he would place it before the Cabinet. In conclusion, he would do the deputation the justice to believe that it was absolutely sincere in its representations, and on matters in which the bill might be improved he would consult the Cabinet.

CHARGE OF CONSPIRACY.

PERTH, Friday.

The names, age, and birthplace of the accused were:—Michael Sawtell, 34, South Australia; Montague Miller, 34, Tasmania; Alexander Arwart, 23, Russia; Alexander Horrocks, 40, Victoria; William Johnston, 48, Queensland; Frederick Hugh Lunn, 32, Victoria; John Collier, 38, Germany; George Hanscombe, 31, England; Christopher Parkinson, 46.

All the accused pleaded not guilty.

The case for the Crown was outlined by Mr. Pilkington, K.C., and after two police witnesses had been examined, the Court adjourned till next day.

CHARGE OF PERJURY.

The accused had been convicted in New South Wales under the name of Keith Maitland Gibson, of fraud, and when asked in the City Police Court recently if he had been, he replied in the negative.

ANGLICAN SYNOD.

MOOREBANK ESTATE.

At the Sydney Diocesan Synod yesterday strong opposition was taken to a motion moved by Archdeacon Boyce, which aimed at varying the Moorebank Estate Trust. This estate was left 70 years ago by Mr. Thomas Moore for the augmentation of the salaries of certain clergy. The revenue from the land was up till quite recently relatively small, but within the last 12 months the Federal Government resumed portion of the estate for defence purposes, paying £40,000 for it.

It was inexpedient, the Archdeacon claimed (speaking for the standing committee), to carry out or observe in their entirety the trusts of the compensation money received in respect of the estate, and he moved that it be referred to the standing committee to introduce an ordinance providing for the administration of the income of such compensation money, except such part as the Archbishop wished to retain the allocation of, in or towards the support of such clergymen licensed within the diocese, and in such amounts from time to time as the Council of the Home Mission Society, with the sanction of the Archbishop should determine.

The view was expressed by certain speakers that it would be a good thing if the council were to act in conjunction with the Archbishop in deciding as to the allotment of the interest earned—about £2000 a year. With this view the Archbishop concurred. There were about 110 clergy in the diocese who would be entitled to participate, but as only half of those could be recipients, the fact that an impersonal body was advising the Archbishop would remove any suggestion that might be raised in the future of undue favouritism.

The main objection to the proposal was that it constituted a direct departure from Mr. Thomas Moore's wish. If carried, one speaker said, it would do harm to the Church, and would not encourage other wealthy men to leave money to the Synod in their wills.

The Archdeacon said that the feeling of Synod appeared to be against him, and he, therefore, withdrew the motion.

CHURCH ORGANISATION.

The problems raised by the present world crisis, and the Church's part in their solution, were the subject of a motion by the Rev. S. M. Johnstone, that the Archbishop be asked to appoint a commission to inquire into the condition of the Church generally in the diocese, and in particular with regard to the sufficiency, support, and spheres of activity of the Ministry. The motion was carried.

HOLY COMMUNION.

The following motion by the Rev. S. E. Langford Smith was agreed to:—"That, in view of the report presented to the general synod by a select committee of bishops concerning the use of separate cups in the administration of the Holy Communion, and the recommendation that in certain cases the use of the Common Cup should not be pressed, a select committee be and is hereby appointed to consider and report to the next session of this Synod as to what is the law the Church as to the administration of the wine."

ART GALLERY.

THE SPENCER COLLECTION.

There will be opened to the public to-day at the National Art Gallery the Spencer collection of Australian pictures. These works were loaned by Sir W. Baldwin Spencer, K.C.M.G., F.R.S., who has been Professor of Biology at Melbourne University since 1887, and director also of the National Museum of Natural History, Geology, and Ethnology in the Victorian capital. The collection was forwarded at the request of the trustees with a letter from the owner, in which he remarked that the loan would show what kind of a collection could be secured by a man of moderate means, and, more important still, would assist in stimulating an interest among the public in Australian art. The writer added that in 1912 he lent it to the Public Gallery in Prahran (near Melbourne), where it was visited by a daily average of 250 persons during a period of 12 months.

The engravings room, the walls of which have been effectively redecorated in a brown tone, and otherwise improved, has been set aside for the Spencer collection, which has been advantageously displayed by the Director of the Art Gallery (Mr. Mann), so that the works of each artist are conveniently grouped. Catalogues are also issued inasmuch as no fewer than 218 works have been hanged. Naturally, the majority of these are from Victorian studios, but a number of familiar names from this side are also included, as well as three or four from Adelaide.

The examples of Arthur Streeton's manner number 41, and form quite an important collection without passing outside the group. His large painting, "The Centre of the Empire," showing Nelson's heaven-assaulting monument with lions couchant below, and all the spaces of Trafalgar Square poetically enveloped in a light haze of smoke, has been inspiringly treated. Crimson gleams of sunset just touch the waters of those fountains which are said to resemble the Civil Service clerks "because they play from 10 to 4." "South Kensington Museum" forms another vision of the prosaic through the eyes of a poet; and the majestic pile of the Imperial Institute in the same neighbourhood shows how warmly, in choosing his theme, the sense of Empire glows within the heart of the wandering Australian. The large painting of Heidelberg, Victoria, with its stretch of verdant meadowland, and widespread view to remote blue hills on the horizon, is overflowing with feeling and charm. Attention may also be drawn to "Sydney Harbour," with Cremorne Point, at that period untouched by Time's (and the builder's!) rude hand, in the foreground. Three small panels of the harbour furnish lovely bits of colour, of which Cremorne, though not so rich in tone, is otherwise a replica of the big canvas.

W. B. McInnes, a rising Victorian artist, and Walter Withers, who has long made his name, are represented by eight and ten works respectively. McInnes's realistic style is best illustrated in the big canvas, "Livelong Day." The morning mists have nearly dried up above the stubble fields on the slope of the hill, where "the impatient husbandman forth drives his lusty team." "Poplars," hanging hard by, is mannered, but strong. The best of the Withers group is "Nearing the Township," in which the pathos of the dying day suffuses a homely highway scene with touching effect. Several Sydney artists are shown on this wall. There is an E. Gruner, characteristic in the almost miraculous suggestion of impalpable shadows from intensity of light; Howard Ashton's "The Back of the Dunes," interesting from the treatment of stunted trees against reflected light in a hungry landscape; and Julian Ashton's "Women Surprised" (so also the casual visitor to the gallery!), the nude figures standing in the foreground of a cleverly painted woodland scene in shadow. There are many examples of J. Hilder, an artist so recently reviewed at length that no more need now be said than that "The Crest of the Hill" was in the Society of Artists' recent Hilder collection, and beautifully illustrates his style. Visitors will admire Hardy Wilson's "Walls of Montreuil," the foliage so rich in varying tone, and the whole eminently picturesque. Delicacy, and an effective sky, give interest to "The Rendezvous," by B. E. Minns.

The collector seems to have generally avoided portrait and figure and genre subjects, as well as interiors, nor do the ones he possesses rank, as a rule, with his landscapes. There is an attractive pastel of a dark-eyed beauty by Florence Rodway in her early style with most accentuated lines—an absolute eccentricity. Otherwise mention should be made of E. Phillips Fox's portrait of Sir W. Baldwin Spencer, with its genial, alert expression, and Harley Griffiths' "Rose," with warm flesh tone in a grey colour-scheme, but the shadows on the bosom over-emphasised. George W. Lambert's most important contribution is the well-remembered picture of "The Bathers," a family group on the shore, making their way down to the sea with children. It is an exceedingly clever well-handled composition. The collection is rich in Hans Heysen's work. Two of the finest things he ever did, "Sunset Haze," with its serenity and soft ethereal charm, and "Tired Sleep," may here be seen.

There are nearly two score drawings by Norman Lindsay, in which, by way of contrast, the humorous power for low-life character in "Satan Fallen," should be contrasted with the alluring idyllic charm of "The Shepherd." Sid Long, Thea Proctor, Tom Roberts, Bernard Hall, Blamire Young, Phil May, J. Shirlow, Lionel Lindsay (whose imaginative drawing, "The Edge of the World," arrests attention), Sydney Ure Smith, John Mather, F. M'Cubben, and other well-known artists are variously represented.

DEATH OF MR. J. HAMILTON.

FEDERAL SESSION.

SUPPLY BILL.

WAR POLICY DEBATED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the House of Representatives to-day the debate was resumed in Committee of Supply of the Government's financial policy. The Supply Bill was passed through all its stages after an amendment by Mr. Higgs to reduce the amount had been negatived on the voices. It was announced that the Income Tax and Amusement Tax Bills would be introduced next week. In the Senate further debate took place on the statement of the Government policy. Both Houses adjourned to Wednesday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Treasurer gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill to amend the Income Tax Assessment Act.

The Prime Minister, in reply to Mr. Riley (N.S.W.), said that a party of Maltese immigrants, who arrived by a French steamer, were refused permission to land at Sydney. Eight, who were former Australian residents, would be allowed entry, but the remainder were to be sent back to Malta.

In committee of supply the debate on the financial statement was resumed by Mr. Elliot Johnson (N.S.W.). He congratulated the Treasurer on his first attempt to secure economy. The financial statement, however, was not satisfactory to him as a whole. There should be a still further decrease of unjustifiable expenditure. That could be effected by further curtailment or suspension of public works, which should never have been undertaken during the war. He claimed that if the Government proposed a tax of 3d in the £ on unimproved land values a revenue of £5,575,000 would be obtained per annum. That would enable decreases to be made in Customs duties, income, and other taxes, which were pressing heavily on the people. Even a tax of 1d in the £ on unimproved land values would yield £1,858,000 per annum for repatriation purposes. He claimed that such a system of taxation was the most equitable which could be devised. He claimed that the Government should have accepted the full responsibility for the conduct of the war, and he condemned the Prime Minister for shifting his responsibility through the referendum on to the shoulders of the electors. (Hear, hear.)

It was, he contended, a lamentable exhibition of weakness. The Prime Minister also mutually helped to bring about the disastrous result of the referendum by calling up men into camp before taking the referendum. He claimed also that a lack of tact was shown under the recruiting methods. He urged the Government to give more encouragement to rifle clubs.

M. Finlayson (Q.) supported an amendment by Mr. Higgs for a reduction of the supply bill, by a total of £1,000,000. He denied that the I.W.W. methods were worse than those practised by many other people who were seeking to make money out of the war. He promised to support the Treasurer in his efforts to obtain money to prosecute the war.

Mr. Fowler (W.A.) expressed fear that very few people in or out of the Chamber fully recognised the seriousness of the present position of Australia to-day. He condemned the Prime Minister for having submitted the question of conscription to a referendum, instead of accepting full responsibility and introducing it by proclamation. After the defeat of conscription at the polls, Mr. Hughes should have resigned. (Labour Opposition cheers.)

Mr. Watkins (N.S.W.) thought Mr. Fowler's criticism of the Prime Minister was most severe and damaging. They had heard that he accused the Prime Minister of having embittered the people of Australia against the conscription issue. He complained of the methods of the Defence Department in the treatment of soldiers, and asked why well-paid men in the department were not sent to the front. There should be quite sufficient returned soldiers with modern experience to do all the defence department work. (Hear, hear.) He had always believed the war was a righteous one from our point of view, and while objecting to many of the defects of the recruiting methods he would do his utmost to advance the work. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Salmon (Vic.) strongly deprecated the financial extravagance of the Commonwealth, and advocated the policy of economy.

The amendment, moved by Mr. Higgs, was negatived on the voices, and the original motion was agreed to, and the Supply Bill for £3,293,290 was passed through all stages.

On the adjournment of the House, the Prime Minister said that next week the Government would submit the Income Tax Bill and the Entertainment Tax Bill.

The House adjourned at 4.40 p.m. till Wednesday.

SENATE.

Senator Watson (N.S.W.) resumed the debate on the motion to print the Ministerial policy statement. Referring to defence matters, he compared a free fighter with a conscript-slave.

The Minister for Defence: Is that the way you speak of the soldiers of France? That is a nice way to stigmatise them.

Senator Story: Is it not the duty of every free man to fight for his country?

Senator Watson: It is the duty of every free man, and it is the duty of the country to give free agency to every man to play his part.

Senator Guthrie: Is that trades-unionism?

Senator Watson: Trades-unionism is a voluntary act for every man who becomes a trades-unionist.

Senator De Largie: When was it a voluntary act at Newcastle?

Senator Watson, replying to an interjection by Senator Lynch (Minister for Works), said:—It did not take much to push you.

Senator Lynch: I was not a camp follower like you.

Senator Watson: I should be sorry to be a camp follower of the hon. member. I am not ashamed of being a camp follower of trades-unionism.

Senator De Largie said he subscribed to the policy that when Australia's shores were invaded every man from 18 to 60 should defend the country.

The Minister for Defence: Conscription.

Senator Watson: Undoubtedly.

Senator Guthrie: What about Senator Ferricks?

Senator Newland: In case of the invasion of Papua, would you send Australian troops there?

Senator Watson: We should send troops to defend every part of the Commonwealth.

The Minister of Defence: By conscription?

Senator Watson said he had never objected to it when applied to home service. The decision of Great Britain to establish conscription was only adopted after five million men had gone voluntarily, and 10 per cent. was as much as any nation could give.

Senator De Largie: That shows that she is making still greater sacrifices.

Senator Grant (N.S.W.) contended that voluntaryism had not broken down, and that Australia was getting more reinforcements than were required.

Senator Story: You advised the people to quit.

Senator Grant: No; Australia has not quitted. If she had quitted, I presume no more men would be sent.

Senator Keating (Tas.) said neutral countries were informed that Australia was going to quit.

Senator Needham: It is only a German lie.

Senator Grant, referring to finance, said they had been shown that the unimproved value of land was £446,000,000, and, in the light of that, the Government should abandon the proposal to impose a penny tax on a sixpenny picture show.

Senator Ready (Tas.) said the modification of the taxation proposal looked as if the Government was determined to stay in office by making concessions to their supporters. All criticism concerning secret juntas came ill from those who, all their lives, had agreed to the system.

The debate was adjourned, and the House at 4 p.m. adjourned to Wednesday.

CASUALTIES.

FALL DOWN LIFT WELL.

George Dovelock, 42, who fell down a lift well at Challis House on Thursday evening died a few hours after admission to the Sydney Hospital.

One of the shafts pierced the side of the compartment in which Mrs. Davidson was seated, and, passing through the woodwork, about three feet of the shaft penetrated her leg.

The Newtown District Ambulance Brigade conveyed Mrs. Davidson to the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital.

LABOUR VIEWS.

MILITARY QUESTIONS.

THE I.W.W.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Interstate Labour Conference concluded its sitting in Melbourne to-day, and the subjects discussed dealt chiefly with military questions. The motions agreed to were as follows:—

"That owing to the doubtful wording of the present oath of military allegiance, which apparently might compel citizen soldiers to fight for the King anywhere, steps should be taken to make the oath clear on the point."

"That Australians serving abroad, who are charged with an offence, should be tried by court-martial composed of Australians, and that at least half of the Court should be composed of men of the same rank as that of the person charged."

"That no proclamation should be issued under any Defence Act, for mobilisation or compulsory training, without expressed resolutions of both branches of the Legislature approving of such proclamation, excepting in

"That, excepting in time of actual invasion of the Commonwealth, every person convicted by court-martial of any offence should have the right of appeal to a civil tribunal, and that members of the Citizen Forces shall retain their full citizen rights, including freedom of speech and right to write for the newspapers."

At this conference the Australian Labour party emphatically protests against the unscrupulous attempt made during the recent conscription campaign by Mr. W. M. Hughes and other conscriptionists, to associate the Labour party with the methods and members of the I.W.W."

"That this conference urges the Federal Parliamentary party to introduce a bill at the earliest opportunity to establish the initiative and referendum immediately in the Federal sphere, thus granting the people a chance of direct power in Federal legislation."

"That this conference is of opinion that the disposal of life and the question of religion are sacred to the individual and cannot be submitted to a referendum."

"That this conference calls upon the Federal Labour party to introduce an amending electoral bill, embodying—(1) the whole of the electoral amendments approved of by the Adelaide conference; (2) a system of compulsory voting; (3) a system of absent voting for Australian citizens engaged in active service at the front; (4) qualification of State members for nomination and election to Federal seats without prior resignation from the State Parliament."

"That this conference expresses its indignation at the savage sentences imposed by court-martial on Australian soldiers, and directs the attention of the Federal Parliamentary Labour party to this tyranny, and asks them to use their best efforts to secure the release of soldiers now in the Goulburn and other gaols."

"That the matter of appointing a delegation to explain the attitude of the eastern States on the political situation be referred to the Federal executive, with power to send a delegation if desired by the Western Australian Federation."

The motions agreed to at the conference will not necessarily be embodied in the Federal platform.

RECRUITING.

The recruiting depot at the Victoria Barracks yesterday wore an almost deserted appearance, and the enrolling officer had a quiet time. Out of 34 men who turned up 6 were rejected as medically unfit for active service, leaving the day's total to go into camp 28.

Inspector George Boyd, of the railway traffic office, Sydney, has been informed of the promotion of his son, Lieutenant A. W. Boyd, to a first lieutenancy. Lieutenant Boyd gained his promotion after the battle of Pozieres. Mr. Boyd has two other sons who have enlisted, Sidney, C. Boyd, of the A.S.C., and Eric Boyd, of the A.A.M.C.

A farewell dinner was tendered to Mr. H. H. Bull, youngest son of Mr. H. T. R. Bull (director of H. W. Horning and Co., Ltd.), on the 5th instant. Mr. Bull had been on the staff of the Yangtze Insurance Association, Ltd., and is leaving for the front. Mr. H. S. P. Storey, the chief agent for Australia, was in the chair.

Dr. Douglas Wood, who enlisted some time ago, and will be shortly going to the front, was presented at Wellington with a gold fountain pen by the members of the M.U.I.O.O.F., of which he was medical officer while in Wellington.

STATE COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMEN APPOINTED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Director-General of Recruiting (Mr. D. Mackinnon, M.L.A.) stated to-day that the chairmen of the State Recruiting committees had been appointed as follows:—

New South Wales: Professor Macintyre.
Victoria: Mr. Wise, M.P.
Queensland: Senator Givens.
South Australia: Senator Newland.
Western Australia: Mr. Fowler, M.P.
Tasmania: Senator Ready.

It was also announced to-day that Mr. Durack, M.L.A., had agreed to join the New South Wales committee.

NO INVITATION.

The State Premier, Mr. Holman, was asked yesterday what part the State Government proposed to take in the new recruiting campaign set going by the Federal Government, under the guidance of Mr. D. Mackinnon, M.L.A., of Victoria. Although it is known that Mr. Holman is intensely interested in any effort that may be made to secure reinforcements for the Australian troops at the front, his reply would appear to indicate that his co-operation has not yet been solicited. "We are going to meet Mr. M'Kinnon as a guest at the Governor's luncheon to-morrow," said the Premier, "but apart from that we have no official knowledge of his visit to Sydney or of his mission. We have not been in any way invited to participate in any work that may be engaged on. It may be that the Federal authorities have a method of carrying on a recruiting campaign without consulting the State Governments. If so, I am delighted to know it."

INSPECTION OF TROOPS.

The District Commandant, Brigadier-General Ramaciotti, V.D., paid a visit of inspection to the Details Camp at George's Heights yesterday, and will also inspect the troops at Liverpool camp to-day.

IN OTHER STATES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

There were only 34 volunteers to-day, and of these 15 were accepted.

BRISBANE, Friday.

Nine recruits were accepted in Brisbane to-day, and three were deferred.

THE SCHOOLS.

SCOTS' COLLEGE.

Professor Macintyre, Moderator-General of the Presbyterian Church in Australia, presided yesterday at the presentation of prizes to the students of Scots' College, Rose Bay. The students sang several patriotic songs under the direction of Mr. Beardsell.

The principal, Mr. J. Bee, M.A., M.Sc., in a brief review of the year's work, said that the college had not been affected by the war. Of the 136 students, 69 were boarders. Eight of the intermediate certificates issued by the Education Department had been secured by Scots' College boys. A member of the teaching staff, Captain E. A. Walker, had gone to the front, and his place was now filled by Mr. Staehli. On the college roll of honour were the names of 110 ex-students who had volunteered for active service. One of the old boys, Sergeant-Major Duncan Wood, had come back wounded. The new rowing club helped to keep the students in good health, and the hospital had not been used once during the year.

Cheers were given for Sergeant-Major Wood, who was one of the visitors.

Congratulatory speeches were made by the chairman, the Rev. J. Goudie, Moderator, New South Wales, Dr. Marden, principal Presbyterian Ladies' College, and the Rev. A. J. Wade.

The most applauded of the successful students were Malcolm M'Intyre, the dux of the school, and head prefect Alister Ross, who received the honour-cap presented by the Old Boys' Union as the best all-round "sport."

THE CENSORSHIP.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Commenting to-day on the action of the Senate in refusing its approval to a war precautions regulation relating to the censorship, the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) stated that, despite the Senate, the Ministry would have to endeavour to do what was necessary in the interest of Australia and the Empire as far as the conduct of the war was concerned.

It is understood that another regulation, to take the place of the one rejected by the Senate, will be issued shortly.

TOO MANY STRIKES.

MR. BEEBY'S SPEECH.

NEW LEGISLATION LIKELY.

WAGGA, Friday.

In the course of a speech at Wagga to-night, Mr. Beeby, Minister for Labour, said it was necessary, in considering the industrial position, to remember that the absence of 300,000 men from Australia, and the employment of further large numbers in carrying out war contracts, placed those who are left behind in a strong position.

All great utilities such as coal, transit, power, and the supply of foodstuffs, should not be subject to the whims of a section of the community, whether they be employers or employees. They had heard a great deal of the danger of the capitalistic monopoly, but they were beginning to learn that the Labour monopoly—particularly where it was used for political purposes—was, if anything, a far greater menace. The present industrial laws had undoubtedly failed to give any measure of industrial peace.

"Taken as a whole," he continued, "the industrial difficulties have been more numerous and more acute since the adoption of our revised arbitration laws. We have to repeal these laws altogether, and let conditions adjust themselves, as in the old days, in the open market, or make another attempt to create a system which will save us from these ever-increasing stoppages. I have for a long time been of opinion that in the end we will be forced to repeal the greater portion of the law as it stands, but will maintain some machinery to fix a standard living wage. In other words, we shall be compelled, by means of a board of trade or some proper authority, to fix a living wage, below which there should be no competition, and leave the adjustment of conditions above that minimum to bargaining, while maintaining ample machinery for voluntary conciliation and arbitration. There still exists, however, in the community, a feeling that we have not yet reached the limit of experiment. Australia will never go back to the old days of absolutely unrestricted competition in the labour market, but it will have to consider the limiting of its regulation to bare essentials, in order that an individual, above the living wage standard, may be paid more in accordance with results than is the case at present.

"Leaders of extreme sections failed to realise that the standard of comfort depended upon the quantity of wealth produced. If production was limited and men were prevented from reasonably exercising their labour, the standard of comfort must be lowered. The weakness of our past experiments had been that they had in many directions led to a reduced output, with an ever-increasing labour cost. That policy could only end in disaster. Present industrial laws were reducing the incentive to greater efficiency. It was to meet problems of that kind that the revision of the industrial laws had become absolutely necessary. The law must be evenly administered. Many unions attached great importance to the necessity of seeing that awards were complied with, but joined in denunciation of any Government which attempted to put provisions against strikes into force. The weakness in past administration had been that efforts had not been made to hold a union responsible for those of its members who suddenly held up an industry.

"I feel confident," the Minister concluded, "that before long the Government will submit for consideration a revision of the law which will be acceptable to every reasonable man, and which will be distasteful only to those who want no orderly settlement of disputes and claim the right to use force, and force only, in obtaining their ends."

TUBERCULOSIS.

RESULT OF MEDICAL INQUIRY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The report of the medical committee, appointed by the Federal Ministry to inquire into the causes of death and invalidity in the Commonwealth, concerning its investigations into the prevalence of tuberculosis and the best means to combat its spread, was tabled in the House of Representatives yesterday.

The chief recommendation of the committee is that the Commonwealth and the State should co-operate in a vigorous campaign against tuberculosis at Bendigo, in order to establish the value of the methods of controlling the disease, known to be useful elsewhere. It is estimated that this experimental scheme would cost more than £10,000 a year. The reason why Bendigo was chosen for the experimental campaign is shown in a table setting out the comparative incidence of the disease in that district, and in Melbourne, in 1914. The rate in Bendigo was more than 73 per cent. greater than the rate in Melbourne.

The committee expressed disagreement with the common belief that tuberculosis was often transmitted from the parents to the children before birth. It contended that almost all cases of family incidence were due to the close contact of healthy members with one who is affected. The committee urges that all cases of tuberculosis should be made compulsorily notifiable, and that notification should be immediately followed by

(A) effective precautions to prevent further infection spreading from the patient, and

(B) examination of all contacts to detect early infection in any person, and appropriate measure for the cure of any early infections so detected.

TINPLATES' FIXED PRICE.

DISMAY AMONG HOLDERS.

To say that the fixing of the price of tinplates at 35/ a box net at the port of importation has caused dismay among holders is to state the case mildly. If plates have to be sold at this rate there will be heavy losses in many quarters, and, as far as can be learned, there is not a box of tinplates in Sydney to-day which will return an ordinary mercantile profit. Apparently the rate has been based on the English quotation for war work, 23/ per box, c.i.f., which would mean a landed cost of 34/6. Thus, on that rate, the return on a selling basis of 35/ would be 6d a box, equal to not quite 1½ per cent. But few, if any, plates have been indented at the c.i.f. rate quoted. There is a great difficulty in obtaining permission from the English Munitions Committee to export even to the dominions, though it be for army purposes, and it looks as though that difficulty will remain until stocks here are materially reduced. The English buyers who want tinplates other than for military purposes have to purchase from stock, that is, from plates accumulated some time ago, at a rate equal to a landed cost here of 38/ a box; but here, again, there is the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of getting permission to export.

Some months ago intense speculation arose in tinplates on the local market. Some speculators, mostly those who were not in the trade, were advised that stocks here were short, and that no plates were coming along. They bought heavily at continually advancing rates, till the price went up to 50/ a box. Their calculations were mistaken. The manufacturers who use the plates had plenty on order, and so the market suffered a slump, and quickly went back to 42/6. Since then it has receded slowly, until the market price last week was in the neighbourhood of 38/ net. The speculator, of course, must take his loss. He gambled on the market, and if the market went against him that is his fortune. But it is not just to the man who imports in the ordinary way of business to fix a rate lower than his cost of importation and lower than the actual market value. Some of the tinplates held to-day cost 46/ a box to land. As the market price was below the landed cost of many of the plates at present available, it is recognised that the market price would have been a fairer guide for the fixing of the cost than the average landed cost, let alone a price below both. The market expected the price to be fixed somewhere in the vicinity of 40/.

A conference of importers is spoken of, with the object of making representations to the Minister for Defence. Perhaps concerted action with Melbourne merchants may be taken.

The Federal Government, under the Customs Act, has prohibited the importation into the Commonwealth of tinplates and terneplates other than those manufactured in the United Kingdom or in British possessions unless the consent in writing of the Minister for Defence has first been obtained.

THE MARKETS.

The markets closed yesterday in a little healthier condition than they opened on Monday. There was a slightly better demand from the country. Metals were slow, except No. 8 galvanised wire, which was actively inquired for, as high as £27 being offered. A little was purchased at that price, though others refused to sell because lots coming along from America would cost about £2 more. The demand seemed to have arisen through some distributors finding that their stocks of this particular gauge were exceedingly low.

All oils were very firm. Holders advanced the price of linseed first brand to 5/10. Stocks were bound to be receding. Meggitt's put up the quotation of Australian linseed oil by 2d, quoting 5/4 in cases for single case lots or in drums 5/7, and for 12 case lots 5/2. This advance was brought about owing to the heavy rise in the seed. As the Australian product has been markedly below the imported article in price, trade during the month has been exceptionally brisk, 60,000 gallons having being delivered, and 130,000 gallons booked for forward delivery.

The demand for tartaric acid improved, and there were some fair sales of parcels at 3/. Cream of tartar was extremely slack at 1/8 for parcels of 95 per cent.

The tea auction yesterday brought out good competition. Out of 600 chests submitted 400 were sold in a strong market, prices realised being up to 13½d.

There was a somewhat improved demand for cornsacks, and sales were made at 9/3 net to rails. Woolpacks were quoted at 4/, and branbags at 8/ net.

The Sydney Marine Underwriters' Association advises that the war rate for steamers, United Kingdom, continent, or home, via the Cape, is 5 per cent.

OVERSEA MARKET CABLES.

THE WOOL POSITION.

LONDON, Dec. 7.

The Bradford tops market is absolutely disorganised, and nothing is doing. Quotations are impossible. It closed with rather a more cheerful feeling after an influential conference, at which all sections were represented. This conference passed a resolution similar to that carried in London last Friday, asking that all wools bought and shipped prior to the taking over of the clip be sold in the usual way.

A well-informed speaker said that sales would be held next week, and would continue to be held for wools which the Government did not require.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

Butter is very firm, and business is restricted owing to short supplies. Danish is about 222/. Australian has been practically cleared, choicest salted selling at 206/ to 208/ and unsalted 212/; lower grades, 194/ to 200/. New Zealand butter is not offering till the Rimutaka discharges, but the price is nominally unchanged. Argentine unsalted is 204/ to 208/.

Cheese is firm—Canadian, 126/ to 130/. Retailers are apprehensive about supplies, fearing the Government will release very little.

CEREALS.

Wheat is firm and quiet; a parcel just shipped to London sold at 81/ per quarter of 480lb c.i.f. Wheat on spot is not offering.

Flour is firm, Australian patents selling at 59/ to 59/6 per sack of 280lb.

Peas are firm; New Zealand maples, 48/. Beans are strong; New Zealand not offering. Oats are hardening; La Plata not offering.

SUGAR.

Sugar is unchanged.

DAIRY.

CASE EGGS FIRMER.

There was a very strong demand for case eggs yesterday, and prices advanced 1d a dozen. River consignments were quoted at from /10 to /10½ a dozen. Parcels from the South Coast and railway commanded from /10½ to /11. New-laid suburban eggs were unchanged at from 1/1 to 1/2. Christmas cake-making is now evidently in full swing.

Stocks of bacon are daily becoming smaller and grocers are finding it increasingly difficult to fill their requirements. There is no change in the proclaimed prices of 1/ for sides, /11½ for flitches, 1/2 for middles, and /10 for shoulders. Hams for Christmas delivery continue to sell freely.

Liquid honey was practically unobtainable yesterday, and the quotation of /5½ was a purely nominal one. Beeswax was also scarce.

The market was again over-supplied with small chickens, and, although agents were prepared to book orders at from 1/ to 2/, they found it hard to clear their consignments. Choice quality birds were in better demand at firm rates.

One or two coastal steamers arrived with butter from both northern and southern ports, and supplies were again ample for all requirements. The arrivals included 12,100 boxes from Byron Bay, 1500 boxes from the Clarence River, 2000 boxes from the Richmond River, and 2400 boxes from inland districts. The price was unchanged at 151/4 per cwt. The Brisbane market is steady at the proclaimed price of 149/4 per cwt. Good rains have again fallen over the dairying districts of Queensland, and will, no doubt, be of considerable benefit. Owing to the absence of shipping facilities the cold stores last week were full. The Medic is, however, loading about 22,000 boxes, but there is no further opportunity of shipments in view at present. The position of the Melbourne market remains unchanged. Local requirements continue to be supplied under the Government scheme. The prospects of freight to the United Kingdom are now satisfactory. The steamer Dorset recently loaded about 28,000 boxes, the Themistocles about 34,000 boxes, and the Orsova, sailing this week, is expected to take about 26,000 boxes. The London market is firm. Australian salted is selling up to 208/ and unsalted to 212/ per cwt.

RAILWAY MARKET.

CHAFF LOWER.

An extra heavy yarding and an almost total absence of prime chaff caused a considerable decline in chaff values, and an equally market reticence on buyers' part. Chaff at auction failed to realise more than 4/10, while lucerne was weaker. A rise was manifest in onions, Silverskins making to 9/6 per cwt.

The yarding comprised 139 trucks of forage, 10 of grain, and 3 of vegetables; while the manifest included 146 trucks of forage, 16 of grain, and 12 of vegetables.

The following sales were effected:—

Wheaten Chaff.—Granger, Harden (9135), 3/; West, Stockinbingal (1429), 3/10; Levien, Uranquinty (13838), 4/10; do (16728), 4/10; ex Murrumburrah (17119), 3/6; ex Coolamon (1721), 2/6; ex Temora (15590), 3/6; do (22731), 3/3; Roach, Mudgee (16751), 4/11; Moss, Mudgee (17013), 4/9; do (3911), 4/6; Bradford, Nubba (7800), 3/9 per cwt.

MINING.

BUSINESS MODERATE.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in mining scrip yesterday.

Edna May Consolidated, contributing, opened /3 firmer at 10/9, advanced /1½ to 10/10½, but receded again to 10/9 for prompt delivery; paid stock changed hands at 14/10. Deeps, at 15/6, showed a rise of /6 in the morning, and later changed hands at 15/9. Delivery in six weeks sold at 15/9 also. Edna May Centrals cleared at 21/6.

B.H. Junction scrip was /1 lower, at 4/3.

In tin, Ratrut opened /3 firmer, at 19/9, and cleared at 20/3; while Trong closing sales at 12/9 showed a rise of /3.

Kampong Kamunting shares have not been officially quoted for the past couple of days. That, apparently, is due to the fact that the new company of the same name, with headquarters at Taiping, has declared a dividend of 1/, which is payable on production of the old scrip, accompanied by a transfer of the shares into the new concern. This is the first time for several months that these shares have not been quoted.

MOUNT LYELL.

HALF-YEARLY MEETING.

The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders in the Mount Lyell Mining Company was held in Melbourne yesterday, Mr. Bowes Kelly presiding.

The chairman, in moving the adoption of the reports and balance-sheet, said that, owing to the shortage of labour for construction work, it was not to be expected that the new converter plant would be ready for operation for some little time. The two methods referred to in the directors' report for the extraction of sulphur from the pyrites were being further tested with the view of ascertaining the comparative payableness of each method. The electric resistance furnace had been improved by the introduction of proper mechanical stirring appliances, and it was thought that that would ultimately be the type of furnace used, the experience so far pointing in that direction. All the company's experimental work had been severely handicapped, not only by shortage of suitable labour, but also by the difficulty and delay experienced in securing the necessary materials. It must further be remembered that this method of obtaining sulphur had never even been attempted before. In view of the company's increasing power requirements further additions were contemplated, with the view of making available a total of about 10,000 horse-power for the greater part of the year, from the Lake Margaret Hydro Electric scheme.

The reports and balance-sheet were adopted.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"A Waltz Dream," with its fascinating music, will be revived at Her Majesty's Theatre to-night with the following cast:—Lieutenant Nicholas (Niki), Fred Maguire; Count Lothario, Alfred Frith; Giulliamo XII., Chas. A. Workman; Lieutenant Monte, William Greene; Taillo, Edmund Sherras; Rigoletto, Seymour Middleton; Casare, Field Fisher; Frangi, Dorothy Brunton; Fifi, Connie Ediss; Bianca, Ethel Morrison; Antonia, Cyril Bradley; Princess Helena, Marie Eaton.

CRITERION THEATRE.

The last six nights of "Common Clay," in which strong parts fall to Miss Florence Rockwell and Mr. Arthur Styan, are now notified at the Criterion, as next Saturday "The Land of Promise" will be produced for the first time. The new comedy-drama is by Somerset Maugham, author of "Lady Frederick," and will introduce Miss Rockwell as the heroine, a society woman, who marries a Canadian farmer (Mr. Frank Harvey), and subsequently rebels against him and her new life. The play ran for nearly a year at the Duke of York's Theatre.

PALACE THEATRE.

"In Old Donegal," a tender, romantic comedy of Irish country life, will be revived this evening at the Palace Theatre for the closing night of the Allen Doone season. In this way the actor-manager will reappear as Larry Donovan, the light-hearted son of a peasant farmer, who disguises himself as a red-haired Shaun, who delights all and sundry with "The Tunes we Love to Hear on Paddy's Day." Miss Edna Keeley will play the role of the coquettish Kate O'Donoghue.

"PEG O' MY HEART" AT THE PALACE.

The Christmas attraction at the Palace Theatre will be Hartley Manners' popular comedy "Peg o' My Heart," in which Sara Allgood and the original Australian company formed by J. and N. Tait will reappear, the only alteration involving the appearance of A. L. Pearce as Chris Brent. This welcome return season will open Saturday, December 23. The plan will open at Nicholson's on Monday, December 18.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

This afternoon (2.15), and again at 8 p.m., there will be final performances of their new burlesque and revue pieces by the Follies of Pleasure. The Ben J. Fuller management will then close the Opera House for nearly a fortnight to complete elaborate preparations for the Christmas pantomime, "The Bunyip," to be produced Friday, December 22. This original Australian fairy-tale is by Ella Airly, who will also conduct the orchestra, and the cast will include Pearl Ladd, Queenie Paul, Violet Trevenyon, Nellie Kolle, Villiers Arnold, and Walter Whyte, and should prove unusually attractive.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

"The Passing Show" has now opened its successful season at the Tivoli Theatre, where representations will be given this afternoon and evening. Sydney James again heads the Strollers, but amidst dazzling scenic surroundings which culminate in the blazing finale of the first act, Madeline Rossiter, Gwen Lewis, Connie Milne, G. W. Desmond, George Gravstone, Winifred Leviere, Eileen Cottey, Vaude and Verne, Bert and Hazel Skatelle, and Degnon and Clifton, are all included in the new entertainment.

THE RED DANDIES, GARDEN THEATRE.

The Dandies at the Garden Theatre, Bayswater-road, are delighting audiences nightly, and as the weather gets more settled they should not fail to attract capacity houses. The Dandies are presenting a new programme of music, fun, and folly, in which refinement is the keynote of their bright entertainment. An orchestral concert will be given on the lawn from 10.15 till 11 p.m. this evening. Coffee, ices, and light refreshments are served al fresco.

VERBRUGGHEN ORCHESTRA MATINEE.

Owing to the enthusiastic reception accorded the Director's choral and orchestral programme last Saturday, it has been decided to make as wide an appeal to the musical public as possible by repeating it in the Town Hall (instead of the Conservatorium) at 3 p.m. to-day. The new Bach Choir will repeat the motet "Jesu, Priceless Treasure," and the orchestra under Henri Verbrugghen will play Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. This will be the last opportunity of hearing this combination for some months. Prices have been fixed on a popular basis. The plan is at Paling's.

TOWN HALL ORGAN RECITAL.

This evening the City Organist will resume his popular recitals at the Town Hall, where his operatic numbers will be the overture to "Maritana," and scenes from Planquette's "Rip Van Winkle," and Puccini's "La Boheme." Mr. Ernest Truman will also play the Boccherini Minuet, and pieces by Gounod, Guilmont, Rubinstein, and Lemmens.

GRACE STAFFORD'S RECITAL.

Miss Grace Stafford's students will perform "A Dream of Fair Women" at their final recital at St. James's Hall to-night. Miss Stafford will appear as Barbara in Jerome's comedy of that name, and as Gladys Owen in "A Christmas Chime." Miss Stella Henry and Miss Amy Brown's orchestra will assist. The proceeds will aid the 56th Battalion Comforts Fund.

WESTERN SUBURBS PHILHARMONIC.

Mr. John Mansfield, who founded the Western Suburbs Philharmonic Society some years ago, and conducted a big performance of the "Messiah" at the Sydney Town Hall two years ago, is now reorganising a choir under the same title. It is his intention to produce for the first time two old classic operas, Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas," and Gluck's "Orpheus," as well as modern grand opera. Rehearsals will begin January 2. This art scheme is further referred to in another column.

UNION PICTURE THEATRES.

The change of programme at the Crystal Palace on Monday will bring forth Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance," the English Gazette, and "A Scoundrel's Toll." "The Common Law," with Clara Kimball Young and Conway Tearle in the principal parts, will be the feature for the week at the Empress. Charlie Chaplin in "The Count" will be screened for the week at the Lyric, with "A Prince in a Pawnshop," featuring Barney Bernard. "The Summer Girl" is announced for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Lyric.

THE LYCEUM.

To-night the American beauty actress, Billie Burke, will be seen on the screen at the Lyceum in the first of the features which constitute "Gloria's Romance." Supporting Miss Burke is Henry Kolker, who appeared in Sydney with Margaret Anglin some years ago. The new programme includes "The Little Wife," a Triangle drama, with Wilfred Lucas and Pauline Starke, and the Keystone comedy "A Scoundrel's Toll."

STRAND AND MAJESTIC.

On Monday next patrons of the Strand and the Majestic will see Marie Doro in "The Heart of Nora Flynn." The heroine of this new photo-play is a warm-hearted and self-sacrificing Irish girl.

WEST'S OLYMPIA.

The matinee attractions to-day at West's Olympia are the Chaplin comedy, "The Count," and the Triangle 5-reel drama "The Return of Draw Egan," a tale of the west, with William S. Hart in the lead. These pictures will also be screened to-night, in addition to the ninth series of the "Iron Claw," entitled "Arrows of Hate," and the Australian Gazette. The new feature for Monday is "The Revolt," a picture version of the play which was recently produced in the United States.

THE PALLADIUM.

The last but one fancy-dress carnival this season was held at Kelick's Palladium on Thursday. The Palladium will be open to-night from 7.30 to 11.

AMERICAN PICTURE PALACE.

The continuous show to-day and to-night at the American Picture Palace, Pitt-street, opposite the Criterion Theatre, will include "The Reapers" and a Charlie Chaplin comedy.

HOYT'S PICTURES.

"Caprice of the Mountains" is one of the new pictures at Hoyt's George-street theatre. At the Mosman Kinema Theatre "The Wheels of Justice" and "By the Sad Sea Waves" are being screened. There are day as well as evening sessions at the George-street house.

ROSEHILL RACING CLUB.

DECEMBER MEETING.

LOVED ONE SECURES CLYDE STAKES.

RUSHFORD WINS DECEMBER HANDICAP.

The December Meeting of the Rosehill Racing Club, which was postponed from last Saturday, took place yesterday afternoon in fine, bright, and seasonably hot weather. There was a large attendance for a mid-week fixture. The track was excellent going, and the grandstand enclosure had a brilliant display of seasonable flowering plants. The fields were of goodly proportions, betting was brisk, and, though a couple of favourites were successful, and well-backed horses got home in two events, the wins of Bratiano and Aberlady considerably eased the burdens of the ring. While taking part in the Maiden Handicap, F. Wilkinson parted company with his mount soon after the rise of the barrier, and in the same event, after passing the half-mile post, a similar mishap befel W. Crockett, the rider of Powdal. Wilkinson's fall was due to Kenverne, on whom D. O'Connor had the mount, running under the filly's neck, while Crockett's misadventure was brought about by Powdal galloping on the heels of Aberlady. In the December Handicap Tartanus was interfered with at the mile post by Narivo putting another horse on to him, but an investigation showed that the interference was accidental. The general arrangements were ably supervised by the secretary, Mr. Geo. W. R. Rowe. The details of the racing are subjoined:—

HURDLE RACE of 100 sovs; second horse 10 sovs, and third horse 5 sovs from the prize. 2m.

Fitzmack and St. Medoc made play, but at the end of the first furlong, St. Medoc was in command from Fitzmack, Yellowboe, and Charlie Mac. Rounding the bend Yellowboe ran to the front and came down the running with Fitzmack, Charlie Mac, and St. Medoc in his wake. Passing the stand Yellowboe was four lengths clear from Charlie Mac, and these were succeeded by Fitzmack and St. Medoc. Yellowboe and Charlie Mac were well clear from their followers along the back stretch, the favourite being next. That order was preserved round the bend, and Yellowboe and Fitzmack turned for home, with the favourite in pursuit. Inside the distance Rongopai took command, and coming on, won by three lengths from Yellowboe, who was eight lengths in advance of Fitzmack. Charlie Mac was fourth, followed by Sweet Step, St. Medoc, and Ennispona, while the last to get home was Sir Balfree. Time, 3m 48½s.

St. Rosaline and Sir Bobadil turned for home on terms, followed by La Balfour, Loved One, and Heatherbrae. Inside the distance Loved One challenged St. Rosaline, headed her at the half distance, and, coming on, won by two and a half lengths from St. Rosaline, who was a length and a half in front of Obvious. Brody jumped off in front, but when they had reached the half-mile post, Conacre was in charge from Mulrose, Prince Mintberry, and Brody. Conacre increased his advantage to two lengths as they rounded the bend from Mulrose, Brody, Astrologer, and Bratiano. That order was preserved into the straight, and at the distance Conacre was still in front from Mulrose, Bratiano, and Charivari, but at the half-distance Bratiano challenged Conacre, and beat him home by a neck, with Mulrose half a length away, third. Charivari was fourth, followed by Malt Maid, Gigantea, Eidolia, and Astrology, with Woodhouse last. Time, 56½s.

Other starters: Machine Boy, 9st 1lb (P. Maher); Firm, 8st 10lb (A. Wood); Tartanus, 8st 7lb (F. Russell); Secrete, 8st 3lb (W. Lillyman); Challenge Crosse, all. 2lb, car. 7st 11lb (W. Crockett); Duke Alwyne, 7st 11lb (J. Quigley); Wirrilla, 7st 8lb, inc. 1lb over (L. Walker); First Lesson, 7st 5lb (F. Wilkinson); Narivo, all. 5lb, car. 7st (W. Pike); Kenilie, 7st 8lb (A. Bennett); Longacre, 7st 1lb (T. Rice); It's Funny, all. 7lb, inc. 1lb over, car. 6st 9lb (J. Wain); Silver Steel, 6st 10lb (C. Barden); Torchy, 6st 6lb (S. Meekings); Toybe, 6st 11lb, inc. 4lb over (W. Simpson); Taquinara, 6st 7lb (G. Hutchins).

Betting: 6 to 1 each v Firm, Rushford, and First Lesson, 7 to 1 v Machine Boy, 8 to 1 each v Challenge Crosse and Tartanus, 12 to 1 v Duke Alwyne, 14 to 1 v Black Nut, 15 to 1 v Longacre, 20 to 1 v Kenilera and others.

Taquinara and It's Funny came on to the course proper, and raced along the river side, followed by Torchy, Wirrilla, and Secrete. Torchy joined Taquinara as they raced along the back stretch, and the pair were succeeded by It's Funny, Wirrilla, Longacre, and Challenge Crosse. Black Nut joined the leading division at the half-mile post, and was followed round the bend and into the straight by Taquinara, Torchy, Wirrilla, Kenilera, and Rushford. Black Nut was still in front at the distance from Wirrilla, It's Funny, Kenilera, Rushford, and Narivo, but inside that point Rushford came with a convincing run, and, cutting down Black Nut inside the half distance, beat him by half a length. Kenilera was four lengths off third, followed by Narivo, Wirrilla, It's Funny, Secrete, First Lesson, and Firm, with Tartanus last. Time, 2m 7½s.

PARRAMATTA MILE, a handicap of 100 sovs; second horse 10 sovs, and third horse 5 sovs, from the prize. 1m.

Mr. W. M. Hennessy's ch m Carine, by Maltster—Field Rose, 5yrs, 9st 2lb (S. Lamond) .. 1
Mr John McDonald's ch m Lady Minnie, 4yrs, 9st 9lb (F. Toley) .. 2
Mr. F. Williams' br g Kagal, 4yrs, 8st 5lb (M. Connell) .. 3

Other starters: Lavanda, 9st 8lb (K. Bracken); Far West, 9st 2lb (S. Lamond); Blackacre, 9st 1lb (A. Wood); Maltster Lass, 9st 1lb (L. Walker); Ickle Lass, 8st 12lb, all. 7lb, carr. 8st 5lb (G. Davies); Crusot, 8st 11lb (W. McLachlan); Zinti, 8st 8lb (A. Callinan).

Betting: 7 to 4 on Carine, 8 to 1 each v Lavanda and Lady Minnie, 12 to 1 each v Blackacre, Crusot, Zinti, and Ickle Lass, 16 to 1 v Kagal, 20 to 1 each v Far West, Maltster Lass, and others.

After Lady Minnie and Kagal had each a turn in front, Ickle Lass took up the running, and, opening up a gap of five lengths along the back stretch, came past the half-mile post, and round the bend with Lady Minnie, Kagal, Carine, and Blackacre in pursuit. Ickle Lass turned for home a couple of lengths in advance of Lady Minnie, Carine, and Kagal, but at the distance Carine silenced opposition, and, coming on, won by two lengths from Lady Minnie, who was a similar trifle in advance of Kagal. Blackacre, Crusot, Lavanda, Ickle Lass, and Far West were next in order, and Maltster Lass last. Time, 1m 41½s.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The eastern high pressure has moved about 600 miles to the NE, and is now centrally situated between Norfolk Island and Brisbane. The Antarctic disturbance still maintains the same amount of energy that it showed on the previous day, and covers a large extent of country, extending from the western portion of the Bight to Alice Springs; and thence to the southern districts of New South Wales.

A high pressure has made its appearance in Western Australia, with the centre about Perth. With these conditions we may expect fine and warm to hot weather, with northerly winds.

Some showers and thunder may be looked for in the southern and western districts. Ocean Forecast.—Squally NW to SW winds between the Leeuwin and Gabo Island.

WHAT LOVELY POMERANIANS!

Where did you get such Beauties?

They are Romany Breeding, purchased from ALBERT H. LONG, ROMANY KENNELS, 134 NEWLAND-STREET, WAVERLEY. He has some very choice MINIATURE PUPPIES FOR SALE just now, and so cheap, too. I left a deposit on a pair to give as Xmas PRESENTS to friends. I am sure they will be delighted with their chums—and very nice, too. I will follow your example and secure one for myself. Ask to see RIBBONWOOD and PERFECTION, the glorious 4lb weight Black and Sable Miniature STUD DOGS. You will not wish to see any other Kennels. All the leading breeders in N.S.W., Queensland, and Victoria have used them, and are well pleased with results. Mr. Long is giving a Special Prize of FIVE GUINEAS each, or SILVER CUP, for the best Puppy shown by either sire. Breeders who are advancing their Kennels are using his prize-winning dogs.

MOSSMAN and ELLIS, the Leading Poultry Auctioneers, have removed to larger and most up-to-date premises at THOMAS-ST, CITY, next Municipal Markets, where they will give all consignments the utmost attention, and, as usual, realise highest prices for Eggs and Poultry

A FARMLET COLONY.

A GREAT CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT,

COMBINING

INDIVIDUALISM

COMMUNISM,

AND PROVIDING TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN

A RARE CHANCE

TO

AND

MAKE EASY MONEY.

ARTHUR RICKARD AND CO., LTD., in pursuance of their great campaign to settle City Workers on the Land, in the outer suburban areas, are prepared to organise a Farmlet Colony at

DOROTHY MOUNT, WENTWORTHVILLE,

providing a sufficient number of people will agree to co-operate on the following lines:—

A.—EVERY MEMBER TO SELECT HIS OWN BLOCK AND TO CULTIVATE HIS HOLDING IN HIS OWN WAY.

B.—EVERY MEMBER TO ENJOY THE PROFITS OF ALL PRODUCTS RAISED ON HIS OWN HOLDING.

C.—CO-OPERATION TO APPLY ONLY TO A GENERAL SUBSCRIPTION TO EFFECT ECONOMIES IN SERVICES, MARKETING, AND PURCHASING, AND TO GAIN UTILITIES.

The advantages thus derived would be as follows:—

1. CITY WATER SUPPLY. (This will be extended to Dorothy Mount as soon as required.)
2. ELECTRIC LIGHTING. (Arrangements are now being made for the installation from Parramatta.)
3. SERVICES to Plough, Plant, Fence the Holdings, and to keep them in good condition.
4. THE ONE VEHICLE to convey goods for all.
5. THE SAME ARRANGEMENT for Marketing Products to be made on behalf of all members, thus effecting a great saving in cost of transportation, etc. (N.B.—As soon as the Colony is in good going order Members might elect to secure a Central Shop in the City and sell direct to the public.)
6. The Establishment of a CO-OPERATIVE SUPPLY STORE, by means of which members could secure their goods at greatly reduced cost.
7. The benefits of MUTUAL HELP in many directions, and the immense economy to be effected in making one equipment serve all, as in the case of Poultry Breeders utilising the same hatchery.

RELIABLE EXPERTS ESTIMATE THAT, CONSIDERING THE EXPENSE THUS SAVED AND THE INCREASED FACILITIES FOR SELLING THUS GAINED, HOLDERS OF ONE ACRE AND OVER SHOULD EASILY BE ABLE TO MAKE AT LEAST without interfering with their ordinary pursuits.

DOROTHY MOUNT IS NEAR WENTWORTHVILLE STATION, WHICH IS ONLY 42 MINUTES FROM SYDNEY. IT POSSESSES MAGNIFICENT SOIL, AND IS CHARMINGLY ELEVATED, COMMANDING GLORIOUS VIEWS.

BLOCKS OF ABOUT ONE ACRE, FROM £80 EACH.

If you are interested in the above proposition please call and see our Sales Manager. When a sufficient number of people has been secured we will proceed with the arrangements.

OUR LECTURE CLASSES.

Owing to the extraordinary demand for seats for last night's Lecture, we were reluctantly compelled to close down on the issue of tickets; but, for the special benefit of those who were disappointed, Miss E. M. Brace will give another of her intelligent, up-to-date, and valuable discourses on Poultry Farming Next Friday Evening, at 8 o'clock. Please apply for tickets early.

FERTILE FARMLET FIELDS.

INGLEBURN.—Five Miles from Ingleburn Station, which is 28 miles from Sydney, splendid fertile fields, known as RABY ACRES. The Blocks range from 5 acres to nearly 20 acres and the land consists of rich brown soil. It is sufficiently timbered to supply all one's requirements, such as building, fencing, firewood, etc. On Lots 3, 4, and 5, facing the Bringelly-road, each of which is 19a 1r 2p, there are fine permanent waterholes; and some of the other Blocks are similarly favoured. The Sydney Water Canal passes the Estate, and arrangements are being made to supply the whole of the property from that source. THIS IS REALLY WONDERFUL VALUE AT FROM £7 PER ACRE.

HOUSES AND LAND FOR SALE.

HABERFIELD HOMES,

AND WHAT THEY MEAN.

THEIR PRICES AND THEIR TERMS.

A good article is never dear—if it is worth the price.

This principle has always been regarded by us in Haberfield Properties.

Haberfield Cottages represent what we regard as the main essential in home construction, modern and artistic architecture, with moderation in price. Conjoined with these is the additional advantage of what Haberfield is as a suburb.

Essentially a Garden Suburb, confined strictly to Town Planning ideas, it is only a short tram ride from the centre of the city, or train journey to the boundary of the estate.

The style of each Cottage is distinctly varied inasmuch as each is set off by the picturesque surrounding of the avenue-like streets.

OUR COTTAGE AT £895.

Occupying a fine allotment, laid out in garden and lawn. This is of modern design, and containing dining and breakfast rooms, 3 bedrooms, kitchen, and all offices.
In this, as in each of our Haberfield Cottages, the interior furnishing is most harmonious. Art mantels, mock beam ceilings, and frieze work over picture railings. The bedrooms are large, and in each the decorations are so toned as to give very pleasant finish to the whole room.

Others of our Cottages range in accommodation and size of land as well as in price from £850 to £1400.

ON OUR TERMS OF £50 DEPOSIT.

The balance is regarded as little more than a rental value in repayment, reducing, as it does, the principal and paying interest. At the same time, any purchaser has the right of paying the whole or any portion of the purchase money at any time he desires.
OUR INTEREST IS ONLY 5 PER CENT.
Your inspection of Haberfield Homes is particularly invited, and every facility will be accorded you if you will call direct to our Haberfield Office, on tram line, or by obtaining particulars from any of our business centres.

HOMESEEKERS, RENTPAYERS.
RENTPAYERS. HOMESEEKERS.
Why do you go on paying rent year after year, with nothing to show for it, when you can OWN YOUR HOME with the money you are now paying as rent every week. We will build a Cottage in any suburb of Sydney 15 per cent. cheaper than anyone else, and we use only FIRST-CLASS MATERIALS. If you own the land we will BUILD WITHOUT DEPOSIT, according to the value of your land. Or, if you have a reasonable deposit, we will buy the land in any suburb you choose and build to your own design. The repayments as rent are very easy, being from 5/4 per week. This includes interest and principal, and you have the right to pay off at any time. There are no legal expenses of any kind, and your rent does not commence until your home is completed. It is a duty every married man owes his wife and family, to provide them with a home, something to fall back on if anything happens to the wage-earner, more particularly in these times of stress. We have made SPECIAL PROVISIONS for sickness and misfortune, and if you have saved enough to buy the land you cannot do better than call and see us about the home to go on that land. We have placed many a satisfied client in their OWN HOME during the past six years, and there is no reason why you should not get yours on the same easy terms. WE ARE SPECIALISTS IN HOME BUILDING, and employ a competent staff of trained workmen able to carry out all classes of work, and although others may copy our advertisements, they cannot quote you our prices or offer you our easy terms. In any case, if you are thinking of building, remember it costs you nothing to call and obtain all particulars of prices and terms from

LANDOWNERS, HOMESEEKERS.
Let us help you put your vacant land to good use, and at the same time realise your ambition to own your own home.
We will erect you a W.B. Cottage Home 15 per cent. less than elsewhere on the following terms.
Weekly payments at the rate of 5/4 for each £100 cost of building, covering both principal and interest, and which will make the home your own in 10½ years.
NO DEPOSIT, THE LAND IS SUFFICIENT, and in some cases we will pay off balances owing on the land.
NO LEGAL EXPENSES or CHARGES of any kind. PAYMENTS COMMENCE WHEN YOU OCCUPY the HOME.
We arrange to suspension of payment if wished through sickness, loss of work, or other unforeseen circumstances.
We employ a qualified Architect, and a staff of competent workmen, and we guarantee satisfaction.
We are an established, reputable company, confine our work to this business, and court the strictest inquiry.
Call and submit your proposal to us, which will be reasonably considered free of any charge.

FARMERS.
A HUNTER RIVER OPPORTUNITY.
You owe it to yourselves and to your families, to make the most of every opportunity that offers. The Famous Hunter River is known to every man, let alone every farmer, as the best farming area in the State. But land is in such demand in this great district that it usually stands at such fancy prices as to altogether debar the ordinary farming man to participate in its advantages. After all the recent rains, FERODALE, near Raymond Terrace, is looking magnificent. Subdivided into areas suitable for dairying, poultry raising, fruit growing, etc., and on terms to suit all pockets, it is the biggest farming opportunity on the market to-day. Close to big markets of Newcastle and Maitland, and to steamer's wharf, where daily vessels call for Sydney; also to the big Co-operative Butter Factory, a big item for the Dairy Farmer. A HUNTER RIVER FARM NEEDS NO WORDS, IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF. Write for terms and particulars to

LADIES SWEETMAKING.
Why in these strenuous times sit at home waiting for the commercial traveller? Why pay freights, delivery, and many other charges? Why go to the warehouse and importer, whose initial cost must be immensely added to, to cover the great and varied expenses they are subject to?
Why not learn the profitable and artistic business of Home-made Sweets, and save at least fifty per cent., and have your goods fresh as required? If you place yourselves in my hands I will make you thoroughly qualified in all branches. I may say owing to pressure of business I have been compelled to teach two or more pupils at one time, and I find this rather an advantage, and have decided to make a reduction in such cases.

TOYLAND

OPENS ON MONDAY

AT

WAY'S IN PITT-STREET.

BE SURE TO VISIT TOYLAND ON MONDAY. CHILDREN WILL ENJOY IT.

You'll be better pleased if you get to Toyland Before the Christmas Crowds.

You can loiter wherever you're most interested; the Children will be better able to see; you'll find the variety greater, the special values more numerous, and you'll leave the Toy Store better satisfied and in a better humour, if you come on MONDAY.

A special trip, through every nook and corner of this wonderful land, is due to children. Toyland should be their playground from now on. It was inspired by them and planned for them, and the children's fairy friend, Santa Claus, makes it his home. The dear, jolly old elf will find out in a twinkling what the little folks want. Besides, there are many things in which every intelligent grown person will be interested.

COME
